By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night stepped into the sensational feud between Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones, and stripped both men of all their responsibilities and duties in foreign economic matters.

The President rebuked them for their "unfortunate controversy and acrimonious public debate," and said it had become necessary, in the public interest, to transfer foreign economic matters to other hands.

Mr. Roosevelt therefore "cleared the decks" and set up a new Office of Economic Warfare headed by Leo T. Crowley, the alien property custodian and head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This will take over the functions of Vice President Wallace's Board of Economic Warfare, which is abolished. It also will take over all the subsidiaries of Secretary Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corporation which are engaged in financing foreign purchases and imports, such as the Rubber Development Corporation and the Export-Import Bank.

Warns Other Executives

President Roosevelt, at the same time, warned all heads of Government departments and agencies—Cabinet officers, "czars" and others—that if they insisted on airing their disputes in public, they would have to send their resignations to the White House.

He reminded them of his letter of last August 21 in which he said that quarrels between Federal agencies were "pounced upon" and exploited by the enemy propaganda machines.

The Chief Executive's move to resolve the Wallace-Jones feud, which was forecast by Cecil Dickson in The Washington Post on Tuesday, was announced at the White House at 9 o'clock last night.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a sharply-worded letter to Wallace and Jones, said that there was no time in the midst of a critical war to determine where the truth lay in their conflicting versions, and he added that he was not trying to determine that question.

"The important thing is," the President said, "to clear the decks and get on with the war at once. To do this requires a fresh start with new men, unencumbered by inter-agency dissension and bitterness."

Both Issue Statements

Vice President Wallace last night called The Post and said he had one statement to make concerning the President's action.

"In war time," he said, "no one should question the overall wisdom of the Commander in Chief."

Secretary Jones, who is now left with his Cabinet post and the domestic functions of RFC, issued this statement:

"I concur most heartily in the President's determination to have harmony and cooperation between Government officials and agencies in the war effort.

"The Department of Commerce and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its subsidiary corporations engaged in foreign purchases will render every possible

Willkie Will Run Again in '44; Pledges Fight on McCormick

By Glenn Ramsey
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 14.—Wendell Willkie chooses to run in 1944.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee, in an interview, made that plain today, in challenging Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, to a hammer-and-tongs campaign for the Illinois preferential primary vote.

Reporters have been asking Willkie for some time about his future plans and he has parried questions with them without a definite commitment.

But he let go when the following question was put to him:

"Have you seen reports that Colonel McCormick may run in the Illinois primary for the Republican presidential nomination?"

Willkie answered in his own handwriting:

"I certainly hope it is true. For then I could really make the issue clear—the greatest issue of the day—American relations to the rest of the world and liberal internal domestic policies."

That is the only direct quotation he would permit, but he said he was anxious to have Colonel McCormick take the stump because he said differences between them were so striking that the people would have clear-cut issues on which to vote.

Willkie said that if McCormick became a primary candidate he would stump Illinois thoroughly and, if necessary, would walk from town to town to spread his doctrine.

Supply of Men Defers Father Draft to Fall

Enough Registrants For 3 Months, Says Selective Service

Selective Service disclosed yesterday that there is a three-months supply of men immediately available for the armed forces, thus ruling out the probability that pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will be drafted before October.

Maj. Emmett Solomon of Selective Service said there are 1,566,000 registrants now in the process of original classification, examination, or induction. In addition, it is expected that there will be about 90,000 young men reaching the Selective Service age of 18 each month.

Out of the new 18-year-olds, however, Major Solomon estimated rejections for all causes will bring the 90,000 figure to about 50,000 or about 150,000 for the next three months.

Six Million Since 1940

Up to July 1, Major Solomon reported, Selective Service has furnished about 6,000,000 registrants to the armed forces since October, 1940. He estimated the total strength of the armed forces now as 9,300,000. This includes, he said, the women's auxiliaries and nurses.

This number will grow to 10,800,000 by January 1 and to 11,300,000 by next July 1, as the Navy expands by some 500,000 in the first half of 1944, while the Army holds to a strength of 8,200,000.

Major Solomon asserted that the draft quotas for July, August and September will be about the same each month, with September perhaps slightly larger. He stressed, however, that these quotas will be larger than the preceding four months.

Asked to explain this on basis of reports that the Army was expected to have reduced calls for men, Major Solomon pointed out that calls in the first place are subject to immediate changes plus the fact that there is a distinction made between Army calls and overall calls from all the armed forces.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown came out fighting yesterday against charges of bungling leveled at OPA by former Deputy Administrator Lou R. Maxon.

After slowly and somberly reading a prepared statement on issues raised by Maxon in his own farewell address, the former Michigan Senator grappled vigorously with fast-flying questions from nearly 100 reporters. As to one of Maxon's main charges that OPA does not know what it is doing or where it is going, Brown said:

End of Coffee Ration Before Aug. 11 Seen

By the Associated Press

Office of Price Administration officials predicted yesterday that coffee rationing will end on or before August 11, and supplies of coffee will be ample to provide all the aromatic brew that Americans can drink.

Coffee supplies appear to justify cancellation of all restrictions, they said, and only some totally unpredictable event—such as a new outbreak of submarine warfare in the Caribbean—could block dropping of rationing.

Anti-Monopoly Blast

16 Major Airlines Announce Plans for Worldwide Routes

Sixteen major American airlines after a five-day conference here yesterday announced their plans for world-wide air routes and submitted a declaration of policy to the Civil Aeronautics Board which would blast open "the withering influence of monopoly" in international air transportation.

The declaration of policy was included in a notice of intention filed with the CAB in which the lines said they will seek routes to various foreign trade areas, four of which were outlined. These routes would run abroad from the United States East Coast, the West Coast, cities on the northern boundary, and cities on the southern boundary.

Allocation of such routes, the carriers said, is for the CAB to determine.

Condemning the policy of monopoly, the group said that "without question, in air transportation where boundaries become meaningless, there can be no rational basis for permitting air transportation within the country to develop and expand on a competitive basis while that outside the country is left to the withering influence of monopoly."

In a joint statement, signed by all the domestic companies except United Airlines, the airline executives outlined what they called "the first attempt to arrive at an American air policy in the international field," basing it on the following principles:

1. Free and open competition—world-wide—subject to reasonable

Double Triumph

By Murlin Spencer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Friday), July 16.—A big land victory—capture of Mubo, New Guinea, with the destruction of 950 Japanese—and a sensational air triumph—the shooting down in the Solomons of 45 enemy planes out of a formation of nearly 80—were announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The seizure of Mubo, made possible by a highly secretive operation involving infiltration behind the Japanese hill positions in the jungles of northeast New Guinea, opened the way for an advance upon the enemy air base of Salamaua, less than 12 miles to the north.

The air victory, scored over Rendova Island, not far from the scene of the land fighting for possession of the enemy air base on Munda, was described as one of the greatest ever won in that area. Only three of our fighters were lost as they piled into a formation of 27 medium bombers and between 50 and 60 Zeros. The enemy losses brought to more than 300 the number of planes we have shot down since the present offensive opened June 30.

There was victory news from Munda itself, with our jungle fighters reported stealthily advancing on that key base in the central Solomons. Once the Japanese tried a counterattack. It was thrown back.

Cripple 10 Nazi Divisions in Surprise Push In Orel Sector

Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, July 15.—Two Russian armies have begun a powerful counteroffensive in the Orel sector against a stalled German military machine, smashing or routing 10 German divisions in three days, recapturing 110 towns and advancing as much as 28 miles, a special bulletin announced tonight.

A vast wheeling movement north and east of Orel threatened to pinch off that German bastion which the Nazis used as a base in their own futile offensive begun July 5.

More than 12,000 Germans have been killed and 2000 captured as "our troops north and east of Orel, after fierce counterattacks, passed onto the offensive," the communique said.

One Red army drove toward the Orel-Bryansk Railway at a point northwest of Orel. The other, springing to the attack from the east, was within 28 miles of the key city.

In this coordinated push the Soviet forces were said to have destroyed 109 enemy tanks, 294 planes, and 47 guns, and captured 40 tanks, 210 guns, 187 mortars, 99 machine guns, 26 supply dumps and other materiel.

54,000 Killed or Captured

This boosted the immense toll of Nazi casualties to more than 54,000 killed or captured in 11 days of attrition. German materiel losses in the same period amounted to 3068 tanks destroyed or captured and 1636 planes shot down.

(The Russian drive coincided with Allied successes in Sicily, and for the first time the Russians semi-officially acknowledged that a two-front war had arrived in Europe. M. Viktorov, a Moscow radio commentator, in a broadcast recorded in London by the Soviet monitor, declared: "Hitler's latest gamble has been foiled. His failure is all the more conspicuous as his main forces are on the Soviet-German front. Hitler has now been forced to fight on two fronts.")

With the Germans' own offensive bogged down on the front from Orel south to Belgorod, the Red army broke through strong German defenses on a 25-mile front north of Orel.

The communique said this Soviet column had advanced 28 miles to capture Klen and Yelensk, points which lie only 18 miles north of the Orel-Bryansk Railway. Another captured town, Staritsa, is 60 miles northwest of Orel.

East of Orel the communique said an advance of 12 to 15 miles

White House Approval Needed

Congress May Pass on Plan For Relief Setup of Allies

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congress will be given a chance in an authorization bill to pass on the preliminary agreement for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, it was indicated last night in usually well-informed congressional quarters.

While the decision is still subject to White House approval, it was said that Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson already has recommended to Secretary of State Cordell Hull that the plan be submitted in this way to Congress for concurrence, as well as for this Nation's share in the necessary appropriations.

This procedure, as well as certain language changes in the preliminary text, were informally discussed at a meeting at the Capitol Tuesday between Acheson and three members of a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating the plan, it was learned.

Congressional approval of this first of a probable series of international agreements on collaborative postwar action, would not treat the relief plan as a treaty requiring Senate ratification by a two-thirds vote. But it would reverse the Administration's original decision to consummate the plan by executive agreement, without action by Congress.

The earlier decision was contested on the Senate floor last week by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, who contended that purely executive action would set a precedent for bypassing Congress on later war settlements. On motion of Vandenberg, Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee appointed a subcommittee to investigate both the plan and procedure. Almost immediately the subcommittee held its first closed session with both Acheson and Secretary Hull. In a moderately heated session, Secretary Hull agreed to reconsider arrangements for handling the plan in the light of subcommittee suggestions.

Initially, Vandenberg insisted that the final agreement must be ratified by the Senate, but it was indicated that both he and other members of the subcommittee would go along with majority approval by both Houses.

Administration Senators were said to feel that the issue would come before Congress anyway when the request for necessary appropriations was made, and it would be necessary in advance to pass a Congressional authorization, as in the case of the Lend-Lease Act. If it was thus submitted, they believed the agreement could be quickly approved.

The next moment we were landing.

Vandenberg, meanwhile, resumed his bout with the Secretary

Overthrow Fascism!

U. S. and Britain Plan Plea to Italy for Revolt

By Frederick Kuh
London Bureau of the Chicago Sun

London, July 15.—The United States and British governments, going over the head of Premier Benito Mussolini's regime, soon will be issuing an important joint proclamation to the Italian people, in effect appealing to them to overthrow Fascism in order to achieve a happier future, it was learned here today.

The declaration, to be broadcast to Italy and throughout the world, will convey the solemn assurance that the United States and Great Britain recognize the need of an independent Italy after the war, guaranteeing a "dignified existence" to the Italians.

Must Destroy Fascism

This pledge will be linked with the reminder that the Fascist regime made Italy a subject state of Nazi Germany.

The Anglo-American promise to respect Italy's independence and refrain from destroying Italy is made conditional, however, upon the emergence of a non-Fascist Italy.

What the proclamation will avoid saying is, perhaps, as significant as what it says.

1. It will shun any commitments concerning future Italian frontiers.
2. It will avert any undertaking that could preclude our use of bases for the further prosecution of the war.
3. It will withhold all promises to to feed Italy.

This does not imply that we will refuse food and other relief to the Italians when liberated, but it takes into account the fact that we cannot hold out rosy gastronomic promises to an enemy country while our Allies, such as Greece, are enduring insufferable hardships bordering on famine.

Insistent Demands

The American and British governments' proclamation to Italy, which is coming very soon, follows a rising demand, specially from Britain's liberal and labor groups in favor of a redefinition of our intentions in Italy and elsewhere.

The impending proclamation, couched in general terms, is likely to satisfy the moderates but fall far short of what some laborites are demanding.

Story of a Reporter who Jumped

Tanks Fought to Standstill By Intrepid U. S. Paratroopers

By John Thompson
Chicago Tribune Staff Writer Representing the Combined United States Press Distributed by the Associated Press

With American Airborne Troops in Sicily (Delayed).—Since late Friday night, an American parachute troop combat team has been fighting crack German and Italian troops, killing and capturing hundreds and hundreds.

They have fought as small guerilla bands, attacking pillboxes and strong points with grenades, anti-tank weapons and knives, and they have fought as a small but rugged team against the Herman Goering grenadiers and tanks.

They have taken rather heavy losses, but they never gave ground. And it was largely through their slashing, demoralizing attacks on strongly prepared enemy positions that the advance of the much larger seaborne force coming in behind them was accomplished in the area around Vittoria.

Almost every man who jumped did a job worthy of an Army medal.

Actually this mission started under inauspicious circumstances, for the entire team was dropped by troop carriers 30 to 50 miles from the planned objectives. Instead of jumping inland in front of the center force to cut off enemy reinforcements, destroy strong points and otherwise soften up the seaborne landing, the entire group of paratroops jumped in front of another force farther out.

Armada of Transports

While the moon was dipping low along the western horizon, we came in over the sea, a mighty armada of transport planes flying in perfect formation. The terrain looked unfamiliar to the team commander, a colonel from Mount Carmel, Pa., but a red light flashed from the pilot controls.

We had been standing for several minutes in our heavy parachutes, the soldiers weighted down with loads of ammunition, guns and demolitions, and this reporter sagging under his own load of non-combatant equipment.

The red light meant that we would be over our objective in a few minutes.

They passed quickly. The green jump light flickered, there was a rush down the aisle toward the door and in a moment we were hurling through space. Then there was the snap of shoulders as the 'chute opened.

Transport in Planes

A brilliant glare illuminated the ground, revealing an olive grove instead of the expected wheat field. For a moment most of us thought that ground troops had sent up flares and were opening fire. Then the sickening realization came that the flare was from one of our transports which had broken in two and had burst into flames.

zontal as I smashed through an olive tree and then to the ground. It was a good landing, all things considered. The others didn't fare as well.

Your correspondent emerged from his tangled shroud with a wrenched knee, skinned knuckles and bruises, and what was not to appear until later—a cracked rib.

That night we went prowling about in small groups, trying to reach some ground that we could recognize. Before dawn, as it turned out later, everyone realized we had landed in the wrong locality and we had to check to find out in what part of southern Sicily we were. Then we started a general movement to the northwest toward our original objective.

Men Jump Into Fight

Many men jumped into the fight right away, landing on machinegun nests or pillboxes. Others soon found their hands full as they ran into Italian strong points along the coast or further inland along strange highways.

We began to lose men, but not many, as the tough, wily troopers rushed the pillboxes. These emplacements were well designed, with 3-foot cement walls, slits com-

25 Miles Inland Now

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 15.—American troops plunged 7 miles deeper into Sicily's mountains in a race tonight with British coastal armies striking toward the Catania Plain, where Allied parachutists and glider troops dropped behind the enemy's lines for what is expected to be a major battle.

The Americans under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., captured another airdrome and also took some important heights in a thrust which reached the Vizzini area, 25 miles inland from Augusta, the British base for the drive on Catania to the north.

Another Italian general, commanding the Fifty-fourth Napoli Division, surrendered with his staff south of Vizzini.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British-Canadian Eighth Army was fighting along the coast, after repulsing a stiff Axis counter-attack which temporarily broke British lines, early yesterday to reach Augusta.

Eighth Army Takes Brucoli

By noon yesterday the British had rejected the Germans and gone on to take Brucoli, 4 miles above Augusta. Their next objective was Lentini, on the edge of the plain 13 miles below Catania port, which is half-way along the road to the important prize of Messina, opposite the toe of Italy.

Lentini and nearby Carlentini already were smouldering from heavy British naval bombardments, and a dispatch from an Associated Press naval correspondent said Allied airborne troops had landed on the plain above Lentini.

(An N. B. C. correspondent, in a report from a British cruiser off the coast there, said the British had captured both Lentini and Carlentini, and that Catania again had been shelled heavily. An Italian armored train which had pushed south of Catania was forced by naval artillery to withdraw, he said.

Hard Fight Expected

A hard fight was expected to begin at Lentini, if it had not already begun, as Axis troops, including units of the Nazi Hermann Goering Division, strove to check the British sweep on Catania, a communications hub for roads leading into the interior, and Sicily's second city.

A headquarters communique said

Campaign Running Far Ahead of Schedule

Undersecretary of War Patterson said yesterday the campaign was far ahead of schedule, and that the current phase calls for "consolidation and enlargement of our beachheads, reinforcing and supplying our troops advancing inland in preparation to meet the inevitable counter-attack by mobile forces of the Axis." He commented on the light casualties, but warned that we must expect heavier ones as the fighting progresses.

Editor Flays Italian Army Leadership

By Frank Brutto
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bern, Switzerland, July 15.—Roberto R. Farinacci in his Il Regime Fascista tonight demanded a change of military leaders in Sicily and assignment of Italy's best forces to defend the island.

In a violently phrased front-page editorial, the former secretary of the Fascist Party in Italy attacked useless elements in the Fascist hierarchy and demanded a "hierarchy of values, a hierarchy that knows how to give the people a little sunshine after so many fiascos and so much bitterness."

Most outspoken of the Fascist editors, Farinacci declared Italy was living in exceptional moments and it "is absurd and extremely dangerous to measure the choices of men and decisions with the military annal as a yardstick."

"It is impossible the Italian army has only one Messe," he declared. "We know of men of valor and these should be entrusted with the tremendous responsibility to save our Sicily."

He referred to Italian Gen. Giovanni Messe, who was the last Axis commander to surrender in Tunisia.

Nazis Plan Fake Raid

London, July 15 (AP).—The refugee Netherlands station Radio Orange warned the Dutch people tonight the Germans were planning to stage a fake invasion of the Netherlands coast in order to trick patriots into exposing themselves.

"The intention seems to be," said the broadcast as reported by the Netherlands news agency Aneta, "that the Germans will undertake faked landings on the Netherlands coast. Apart from that they would drop German parachutists dressed in British uniforms.

"The grand idea is that Dutchmen would go into the streets thinking the day of liberation had come. Germans believe they would probably take their arms with them. Therefore, together with the faked landings and dropping of parachute troops, raids and searches in the streets will take place."

Engineers Quickly Put Wheatfield In Sicily to Use

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press.

With the American Seventh Army in Southern Sicily, July 13, (Delayed). — Twenty-four hours after they landed in Sicily under strafing attacks by Nazi planes, American soldier engineers accompanying the invasion troops had built and ready for service a complete landing field for Allied fighter planes.

"We just grabbed the flattest wheat field we could find and went to work," said Lieut. Edwin Munroe of Talladega, Ala.

"In 24 hours we had a taxi trail all around the field, the runway ready and gasoline, ammunition and oil to supply the planes.

"Our equipment was landed the day after the invasion or we could have been in operation even sooner. We landed at 11 a. m. one day and by 5 p. m. that same day we were turning that wheat patch into an airport."

P-40 First Customer

The first customer was an American P-40 with engine trouble which made a forced landing.

Then a wounded P-38 pilot who had been shot through an arm by an Me-109 and two P-38 fellow pilots brought down their craft. After seeing the wounded flier off to a hospital, the other two took off to return to the battle.

The engineers didn't even knock off to hunt standard Army grub, feasting briefly on tomatoes and melons in the fields and then pitching in again on the arduous labor of clearing and smoothing the runway.

As Monroe pridefully told how the wheat field was whipped into military service an American Spitfire in a group patroling overheard circled and landed.

Air Unit Tenant

Capt. W. C. Bryson of Castlegate, Utah, flight leader, stepped out.

"Have you got plenty of ack-ack guns, food and gasoline?" he asked.

"We are set up to do business," answered Munroe.

"We have scores of aircraft and hundreds of men. Can you take us?" came the question.

"Okay, come on in," said Munroe.

A minute later Bryson took off.

It was as offhand as that—moving day during a military operation. You pick the best home you can and settle down on it before some other unit beats you there.

Among the group of soldier engineers with Munroe were Lieut. Estell Draper of Knoxville, Tenn.; Leonard Fallon of Elkhorn, Nebr.; Murel R. Williams of Blanchard, Okla., and Corpl. Loran M. Cullen of Lucas, Kans.

Text of President Roosevelt's Statement and Letters on Revision of Economic Warfare Setup

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's statement and letters concerning revisions of economic warfare follows:

The President today issued an executive order to unify the policy of the various administrative agencies engaged in different phases of foreign economic matters. The order also relieves both the Vice President and the Secretary of Commerce of any responsibilities or duties in this field and transfers such responsibilities and duties to other hands.

1. The present Board of Economic Warfare, of which the Vice President is chairman, is abolished.

2. All of its powers, functions, and duties are transferred to a new Office of Economic Warfare, headed by a director. Mr. Leo T. Crowley has been appointed such director.

3. The United States Commercial Corp., the Rubber Development Corp., the Petroleum Reserve Corp., the Export-Import Bank of Washington, and all the other subsidiaries of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., which are now engaged in financing foreign purchases and imports, are transferred from the Department of Commerce and from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to the new Office of Economic Warfare to be administered by the new director.

4. Until such time as the Congress provides other means of financing the Office of Economic Warfare, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. is directed to turn over to the Office of Economic Warfare all funds necessary to carry on its operations.

5. The director of the Office of War Mobilization is given the responsibility of unifying and coordinating the policies and programs of the agencies engaged in foreign economic matters in conformity with foreign policy of the United States as determined by the State Department.

The President today addressed the following letter to the Hon. Henry A. Wallace, chairman of the Board of Economic Warfare, and to the Hon. Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce:

"Gentlemen:

"I have come to the conclusion that the unfortunate controversy and acrimonious public debate which has been carried on between you in the public press concerning the administration of foreign economic matters make it necessary, in the public interest, to transfer these matters to other hands.

"In the midst of waging a war so critical to our national security and to the future of all civilization, there is not sufficient time to investigate and determine where the truth lies in your conflicting versions as to transactions which took place over a year and a half ago.

"My action today is not intended to decide that question. The important thing is to clear the decks and to get on with the war at once. To do this requires a fresh start with new men, unencumbered by interagency dissention and bitterness.

"I am persuaded that the present controversy indicates that future cooperative action between your two agencies is impossible, and that without full cooperation between you the program of economic warfare cannot be carried out.

"I am sure that the American people understand that both of you have attempted to do your duty as you have seen it; but we must go forward without any further public debate as to matters which are now academic, so far as winning the war is presently concerned.

"I have therefore issued today an executive order of which I am attaching a copy for your information and guidance.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

The President also addressed identical letters under this date to the heads of departments and agencies. The text of these letters is as follows:

"Dear sir:

"On August 21, 1942, I sent to the head of each department and agency of the Federal Government a letter, copy of which is attached.

"I call your attention to the statement contained in that letter that 'disagreements either as to fact or policy should not be publicly aired, but are to be submitted to me by the appropriate heads of the conflicting agencies.' Notwithstanding these positive instructions, disagrements between agencies have been publicly aired on several occasions.

"I realize the nervous strain under which Government officials are working in wartime but I cannot overlook any further violations of my instructions. By this letter I do not place any restrictions upon your furnishing statements in response to congressional inquiries. But if when you have a disagreement with another agency as to fact or policy, instead of submitting it to me or submitting it to the director of War Mobilization for settlement under the terms of the order creating that office, you feel you should submit it to the press, I ask that when you release the statement for publication, you send to me a letter of resignation.

"If any subordinate of yours violates my instructions in this regard, I shall expect you to ask for his immediate resignation.

"I am sending identical letters to the heads of every department and agency of the Government.

"Sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

The executive order follows:

EXECUTIVE ORDER

Supplementing the Executive Order Establishing the Office of War Mobilization and Providing for the Unifying of Foreign Economic Affairs.

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes of the United States, particularly by the first War Powers Act, 1941, as President of the United States and as commander in chief of the Army and Navy, and in order to provide for the more effective unification of the agencies concerned with foreign economic affairs, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. The Board of Economic Warfare, existing pursuant to paragraph 2 of Executive Order No. 8839, July 30, 1941, as amended by Executive Order No. 8982, December 17, 1941, is terminated. There is established in the Office for Emergency Management an Office of Economic Warfare, at the head of which shall be a director, appointed by the President, who shall exercise the functions, powers and duties of the Board of Economic Warfare. 4 Rangers Charge Mined Beach, Take 52 Axis Officers

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 15 (AP).—Four American Rangers, charging a heavily mined beach at Gela during the American operations there, captured 52 Italian officers in one building after a short fight, American observers reported today.

The Ranger detachment landed at one of the most heavily defended points on the south Sicilian coast Saturday. German mines—the type which jump 4 feet in the air on contact and spray fragments over a wide area—had been thickly sown by the enemy.

But the American spearhead, despite enemy machine-gun fire, crossed the deadly shore strip and quickly began mopping up the town itself.

New Zealander To See Roosevelt

Lieut. Gen. Sir Bernard C. Freyberg, V. C., commander of the New Zealand division attached to the British Eighth Army which flanked the Mareth Line in Tunisia, has arrived on the West Coast en route to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt and high ranking Army officials, the New Zealand Legation reported tonight.

The Legation said that General Freyberg, who has spent the last four weeks conferring with the New Zealand government, would be met here tomorrow by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

Mackenzie King Sought Canadian Mention on Sicily

Ottawa, July 15 (AP).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King told the Commons today he had appealed to President Roosevelt last week to see that Canadians were mentioned in early communiques on the Sicilian invasion.

The Prime Minister said Mr. Roosevelt replied that he agreed with that point of view and would see that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief, made mention of Canadians.

Mackenzie King said that before the attack was announced early Saturday morning he had been informed of planned announcements of the action which spoke of "an Anglo-American force," without mention of the Canadians.

(The Canadian First Division is engaged in the Sicilan battle.)

"I am going to keep all the military secrets I can, but I am to regard the Canadian forces services as on a par with those of Britain and the United States," said Mackenzie King, amid applause

'Very Great Damage' Hurled on Messina

Bombers Hammer Most Important Sicilian Port

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 15.—Hundreds of Allied bombers, striking from bases both in North Africa and the Middle East, heaped "very great damage" on Messina yesterday in one of the heaviest assaults ever delivered against the enemy's most important Sicilian port, a communique said today.

Other Allied planes, many operating from newly captured air fields in Sicily, ruled the skies over the island and continued their furious attacks against Axis positions throughout Sicily and enemy shipping in surrounding waters.

More than 200 Flying Fortresses, Mitchells and Marauders, escorted by fighters, blasted harbor installations and railway communications at Messina, barely two miles from the Italian mainland, and virtually the only port through which the enemy can reinforce his shrinking Sicilian defenses from the continent.

Ferry Terminals Battered

Seventy-five American Liberator bombers from the Middle East dumped more than 400,000 pounds of high explosives on Messina for their part in the devastating daylight assault. Attacking in three waves, the Liberators also concentrated on the ferry terminal and railroad yards, then continued on across the Messina Strait to bomb the opposite terminal at San Giovanni on the Italian mainland.

The heavy daylight blow followed a night attack on Messina by the Royal Canadian Air Force, disclosed for the first time to be participating in the Sicilian campaign. R. C. A. F. Wellingtons also dumped their bombs on the port and railroad yards.

Although fighter opposition at Messina was extremely light, the bombers were forced to smash their way through intense barrages of antiaircraft fire.

the four-engined B-17s led the way, followed by the Mitchell and Marauder medium bombers which laid several strings of explosives squarely across buildings and barracks, causing new fires.

Foes' Transport Hit

Meanwhile, torpedo-carrying Beaufighters operating over the Tyrrhenian Sea knocked another hole in the enemy's naval supply lines by blowing up one large tanker, setting fire to another, and leaving a 7000-ton merchant ship sinking. These R. A. F. coastal command planes also shot up an enemy destroyer and a cargo vessel and blasted a Junkers-42 transport plane out of the air.

Sighting three tankers off Maddelena, Italian naval base on Sardinia, the Beaufighters picked out the largest and planted three torpedoes in her side which caused her to explode. Then they shelled a smaller tanker which was burning fiercely when they left.

The latest successes in the campaign to keep the Axis from sending supplies and reinforcements to Sicily by water brought the total to four freighters sunk, one left sinking, one tanker sunk, another left burning, and at least three destroyers damaged.

Allied planes from bases in North Africa, Malta, Pantelleria and Sicily ruled the skies over the entire island, protecting the ground forces driving forward against tougher enemy resistance and ripping up communication and transport lines in that portion of Sicily still held by the Axis.

In widespread operations throughout the day and preceding night, the Allied airmen shot down nine enemy planes, including the JU-52, while losing three craft of their own.

Medium and light bombers struck double-barreled blows at Palermo on the northwest coast and at Enna in central Sicily, while other Allied raiders attacked Gerbini, Termini, Lercara-Friddi, Leonforte, Vallelunga and Stefano.

Hunting in packs, Lightnings roamed over the Sicilian countryside and shoreline, searching for targets. This is what they reported:

Half of the trucks in a convoy of 25 or 30 destroyed, five half-tracks set afire; two trucks hit directly and two others left ablaze; direct hits on docks and seaplanes at a coastal base; a gasoline-carrying truck blown up; a bridge bombed; a tug towing two large barges hit and forced to run aground.

Former enemy air bases in Sicily now held by the Allies include those at Pachino, Biscari, Gela-Farello, Gela-Porte, Olivo, Licata and Syracuse.

Anti-Ration Plan

WPB Bans Scare Sales Of Clothing

By the Associated Press

The Nation's clothes merchants were placed on an honor system yesterday to comply with a wartime code of selling practices which the War Production Board said was designed to discourage "overzealous" salesmen and "excess" buying. Adherence, the WPB said, should help stave off any possibility of clothes rationing.

The code, laid down by War Production Chief Donald Nelson in a declaration of policy, ruled out for the duration advertising phrases coined to stimulate sales through such scarcity appeals as: "Buy now—these prices are good for a short time only."

In place of that type of advertising, the WPB suggested instead that the copywriters devote themselves to: Item advertising of regular merchandise at regular prices; institutional advertising, and to advertisements informing the public about the need for conservation and care of goods, about the services of their repair departments, and about the war effort.

The code was drafted by Arthur D. Whiteside, director of WPB's Office of Civilian Requirements, after consultations with representatives of large and small textile retailers, and was broadcast through telegrams to various retail trade associations.

Kiska Attacked Fourth Time In Eight Days by U. S. Warship

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japan's isolated and battered base on Kiska Island in the Aleutians received its fourth warship bombardment within eight days Wednesday, raising speculation that an American offensive against the island might be in prospect.

A single United States light war vessel stood off Kiska early July 14 and pumped shells into enemy positions on Gertrude Cove, the Navy reported.

There was no return fire from Japanese shore batteries, though the harbor there is known to be protected by coastal guns. Apparently, the enemy garrison did not want to betray its gun positions to the longer range weapons on the warship.

There has been considerable speculation here as to whether American forces in the North Pacific will launch an offensive to capture Kiska from the Japs this year. The weather—fog, rain and high winds—make air operations difficult, if not impossible, a large part of the time.

Fog might aid landing expeditions at the start, by enabling them to get ashore undetected, but thereafter the job of wrestling the rugged island from the Japs would become very tough. There is some prospect of slightly better weather late in the summer but by October it will grow steadily worse.

The best month of the year for operations in the Aleutians is May. Attu was conquered in three weeks last May.

Reserves Halt Allies In Sicily, Nazis Say

Violent Fighting Continues Despite Heavy Counterattacks, Both Berlin and Rome Report

By the Associated Press

London, July 15.—Fresh German reserves were declared by the Berlin radio tonight to have counterattacked the Allies invading Sicily in the region south of Catania, and both the Italian and Nazi communiques said violent British and American drives had been checked.

"Fighting in southern Sicily is continuing with undiminished violence," the German communique said. "At several points, enemy attacks, launched with the support of tanks, were repulsed."

Hours after the communique, the Berlin military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, told of the counterattack south of Catania, which the British Eighth Army is approaching.

"In Sicily, enemy pressure is being contained by Axis troops, who repulsed stubborn enemy attacks launched with the support of substantial armor," the Italian bulletin said.

Allied Reports Differ

The communiques were at variance with Allied reports of Italians surrendering by the thousands.

In marked contrast to the more confident tone was the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio account saying the Axis position in Sicily is "extremely serious" and that "further infiltration attempts must be checked in order to avoid endangering Axis defenses in the Catania plain."

A German combat correspondent in Sicily wrote that the "Allies had planned a pause in fighting Wednesday to regroup their formations for impending heavy fighting" but that Axis forces had not allowed the invaders to rest. Another said the American Seventh Army had been repelled with heavy losses in an attempt to penetrate Axis lines. Some 43 United States tanks were knocked out by one unit in 12 hours, the report said.

Most unofficial radio comment from enemy camps was subdued, but broadcast quotations from Italian newspapers showed that Mussolini was striving desperately to buck up Italian morale.

Regime Fascista, of Milan, under the heading, "Let Us Face Realities," hammered home the line that the landings in Sicily were possible only because of immense Allied material superiority.

"The hellish fire of heavy caliber naval guns and a hail of bombs" permitted the landings, the German agency D. N. B. contended.

The Rome radio declared the landing was "a breach in the Fortress Europe and the sooner it is sealed, the sooner the freedom and independence of European peoples will be saved."

The Rome commentator emphasized the difficulty German and Italian troops were having in "containing" the invaders.

Resurgence of Air Power Claimed

German and Italian communiques asserted a resurgence of Axis air power, in contrast to Allied reports that enemy planes virtually had been driven from the air. The Axis claimed considerable losses were inflicted on Allied shipping. The Italians said four ships of 27,000 tons and a destroyer were sunk; two other cargo ships and a heavy cruiser were damaged. There was no confirmation of these assertions. Axis communiques said parachute troops dropped behind their lines were wiped out.

Like an epitaph, the Italian communique praised the 207th Italian Coastal Division which the Allies said yesterday had been eliminated. Rome also praised the Nazi Hermann Goering armored division, which the Americans mauled the day before.

Mussolini was reported to have extended the "active war zone" to include Naples, which meant that martial law had been extended over most of the foot of the Italian boot.

Airborne Allies Behind Axis Lines in Sicily

"considerable gains" had been made by the land armies in the last 24 hours and, presumably referring to the fight for Catania plain, it added that British and American air-borne and parachute troops had carried out "successful operations."

Part of the Hermann Goering Division already had been badly mauled by the Americans in their inland strikes from Gela toward Caltagirone and Vizzini when the British Eighth Army suddenly found itself attacked by units of the same outfit.

The British hurled the Germans back onto the Catania plain, terrain ideally suited for tank battles, and one of the most decisive battles of the whole campaign may be fought there.

Capture of Catania would set the trigger for a gigantic trap of all Axis forces in Sicily. The town controls roads running into the interior, and would leave the Axis troops only one major escape exit, the coastal run along northern Sicily toward Messina, 55 miles above Catania.

One salient fact emerging now is that the Axis has really begun to fight, and is mobilizing for a stand after several earlier futile attempts to push the Allies back into the sea and a series of delaying actions. The Allies now expect a concerted Axis counterdrive.

(Berlin radio reports recorded by the Associated Press asserted that American and British parachutists that "landed in the Catania area" had been quickly overcome, an action which "probably upset the tactical plans of the British" pushing along the coast.

(The Nazi military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, said the British "so far have failed to pass beyond the plain south of Catania," and were meeting strong resistance as the Axis called up its reserves. He added that the Allies also were bringing up reinforcements.)

In the fighting around Augusta, one British column took Melilli, 6 miles southwest of the port. The capture of that town, Brucoli to the north, and two more points taken by the Americans in the southwest, gave the Allies a bag of at least 24 towns in southeastern Sicily.

Dispatches said that powerful formations of Axis tanks had been brought into line to try to stem the Allies. Artillery batteries also were becoming more numerous. Ship-to-shore communications tipped Allied warships on the location of these batteries and in some cases they were picked off with the first few naval salvos.

But farther inland the Americans did not always have this advantage as they fought their way north through the mountains toward Catania plain. Vizzini, about 30 miles inland, is 20 miles southwest of Dentini. The mountain town also is an important road junction for a winding east-west artery.

The Americans in this area form the American right flank, and are in contact with Canadians who earlier took Palazzolo, below Vizzini. Altogether the Americans now hold a line running almost due east from Naro, on their left flank, to Vizzini.

In the middle the Americans were threatening Caltigirone; in the west a Sicilian dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Harold Boyle disclosed that the towns of Riesi and Campobello had been taken about 15 miles northeast and 12 miles north, respectively, from the beach held at Licata.

It was announced today that American amphibious jeeps and amphibious 2-ton trucks mounting two machine guns are among new weapons being used in the campaign.

The name of the new airdrome captured by the Americans was not learned immediately. The air and seaplane bases now in Allied hands include Pachino, Biscari, Gele-Farello, Ponte Olivo, Licata, Syracuse, Comiso and Pozzallo. Some of these fields already are being used by Allied airmen.

Another development disclosed today was that detachments of Goums now are in battle zones. These fierce French native warriors, who are skilled particularly in night raiding, terorized Axis forces during the Tunisian campaign.

NewBombingRaids On Italy Indicated

London (Friday), July 16 (AP).—Air raid alarms sounded in Basel and western Switzerland early today, indicating that Allied planes again might be attacking Italy from the north.

Where Allies Gain

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IN SOUTHEAST SICILY—Black line represents approximate front in southeastern Sicily on basis of yesterday's dispatches from Allied headquarters in North Africa. British were reported at Brucoli, north of Augusta, in their drive up the eastern coast toward Catania. Further west Americans were gaining in the Ragusa-Vizzini sector.

Yanks Take Mubo In New Guinea

but decidedly not ontgunned. We shot down more enemy planes than we put in the air to give them battle.

Over New Georgia and Rendova more than 260 Japanese planes have been shot down, as against 50 of our planes. Many of our pilots were saved.

Communique reports lacked detail on the drive for the Munda air base but it contained suggestions that considerable fighting still lies ahead. One indication was a heavy plane attack on enemy positions at Bairoko, above Munda on the Kula Gulf. This makes clear the enemy garrison still is holding out there.

The communique told of heavy enemy resistance at Munda. Apparently we either are attempting to break through or are near the perimeter of the defense which the Japanese set up to hold that base. These include foxholes and log bunkers.

"The Mubo bastion has been captured," the communique reported.

"United States forces after landing and consolidating a beachhead at Nassau Bay on June 30 moved inland up the valley of the Bitoi River, effecting a junction with Australian units in Buigap Creek at dusk on July 10.

"This move, effected in complete secrecy, operated to cut the enemy's line of communication between Mubo and Salamaua and isolate his garrisons on Observation and Green Hills.

"Following this enveloping move and in coordination with attacks on elements in the rear areas, Australian forces attacked from Lababia Ridge and Garrison Hill and destroyed the enemy defenses on Observation Hill, the Pimple and Greens Hill.

"Our ground forces have now cleared the Mubo area of all organized enemy resistance and are pressing on to Koiatum. Approximately 950 enemy troops were destroyed. Our losses were light."

The capture of Mubo eliminated a strong point only 12 miles from Salamaua. Since the fall of the Papuan Peninsula of southeast New Guinea, Allied jungle fighters had been infiltrating from the south until they held ridge tops overlooking Mubo in the spring.

But the Japanese, entrenched on hills overlooking the jungle track between Mubo and Salamaua, turned the war there into a stalemate until a landing was made by our forces east of Mubo at Nassau Bay, on the coast below Salamaua. These invaders then cut over and behind the enemy's Mubo positions while Australians continued to pose a menace from the front.

Today's communique said that Japanese planes had made a new attack on the Nassau Bay area but that it was without effect.

In the central Solomons, where Munda is the objective, for the second straight day United States planes dealt a blow to Japanese shipping above New Georgia, near Vella Lavella Island. An enemy merchantman was sunk and another set afire. Yesterday's communique also reported the sinking of a cargo ship in those waters.

Today's communique also disclosed that after second battle of the Kula Gulf, July 13, in which a Japanese cruiser and from three to five destroyers were sunk by units of the United States Navy, the U. S. destroyer Gwin was sunk. The Gwin was damaged in that engagement and later sank while under tow.

It was the third American warship disclosed to have gone down during the present Solomons warfare. The light cruiser Helena was lost in the first battle of the Kula Gulf, in which between nine and 13 enemy cruisers and destroyers were sunk, and the night before the battle the United States destroyer Strong was sunk while shelling enemy positions on New Georgia.

The point the destroyer was shelling was Bairoko Anchorage, on the Kula Gulf of New Georgia, 12 miles above Munda. Today's communique reported that our diverbombers had attacked enemy positions there Thursday with 1000 and 2000-pound explosives, after which the Japanese were strafed.

"Our forces are continuing to advance toward the Munda airdrome against heavy enemy resistance," the communique said.

"On the night of the 14th an enemy counterattack was repulsed. Four enemy guns were destroyed by our artillery."

These were the only details supplied on the Munda fighting but it hitherto has been disclosed that on the eastern side our advanced patrols were within 2 miles of the landing strip and that a pincers was being formed by forces there and others moving down from the northeast. The positions against which the advances are being made include foxholes and log bunkers.

The cargo ships hit off Vella Lavella were attacked near Baga Island. The two-engined bombers which hit them also strafed and sank two barges near Ganonnga Island. Later, fighter planes sighted and set afire a barge near Pakoi Bay.

(The barge often is used by the enemy to sneak supplies down the coast to imperiled points, such as Munda.)

The United States Air Force pressed the job of neutralizing with bombs the enemy airdromes just north of Munda. Torpedo and dive bombers yesterday attacked the Vila airdrome on Kolombangara Island and areas of encamped enemy troops, dropping 30 tons of bombs. An hour and a half after the attack, some of the fires still were burning.

The Rendova air fighting was thus described:

"Our fighters intercepted and dispersed an enemy formation of 27 bombers and 50 to 60 Zeros shortly after noon, shooting down 15 bombers and 30 fighters. Three of our planes failed to return."

Draft of Fathers Deferred to Fall

Overall calls from all services generally remain the same, although Army and Navy demands fluctuate.

Major Solomon disclosed that there is a strong probability that young men now deferred for agricultural purposes may be reclassified for induction after the harvest season.

He said this and the growing policy of reviewing 4-Fs and deferments for necessary occupation is largely the reaction to growing public sentiment to safeguard fathers and bona fide homes as long as possible.

Average induction age now, he said, is 24 years. He pointed out that rejections increase with the age level. At present, he disclosed, rejections for psychiatric reasons are of "tremendous proportions."

The over-all rejection rate, he said, is 40 per cent of the registrants called for final screening. About 6 per cent of the registrants, he said, are rejected early at the local board level.

On July 1, 1943, he said, there were 29 million registrants under 45 years of age. Out of this group, only men who have passed their eighteenth birthday, but not yet reached their thirty-eighth, are now being inducted.

United Nations Relief Plan May Go Before Congress

of State over whether Republican congressional leaders agreed to United States participation in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation set-up without action by Congress, or had authority to do so

Secretary Hull had written the Michigan Republican on July 6 that "it has been decided, after consultation with the majority and minority leaders of both houses of Congress, that United States participation in the establishment of this United Nations administration should be through an executive agreement."

Vandenberg yesterday issued a statement saying there was "an unfortunate difference in recollections" as to what happened at the White House conference. He quoted a telegram from Senate Majority Leader McNary, to the effect that "our distinguished President never discussed with me the terms and conditions contained in the draft agreement. . . . Positively there was no visible intent to bind anyone present to any particular course of action or to the contents of any agreement." Vandenberg also quoted House Minority Leader Martin as writing him: "We never saw any agreement and we never made any commitments outside of the general expression that it was probably desirable to have some sort of relief organization."

They Knew We Were Coming

With the American Seventh Army at Gela, Sicily, July 12 (Delayed) (AP).—At a prison camp here one Italian officer said today that although the civilian population was kept in ignorance, the military garrison was informed on July 7 that the Allies would attempt landings on July 10—as they did. Asked why no greater effort was made to stop the landings if that were true, he replied indignantly:

"We fought bravely and well. But we could not stand up against your naval guns. They blew our guns and fortifications into the air and cut our friends in half. It was frightful."

When asked why they were not reinforced if they knew the points at which the Allies planned landings, he replied: "We saw no need for reinforcements. We had been fortifying these positions for two years."

Twenty minutes after commanding General Patton came ashore yesterday, German bombs struck at the exact point on which he had landed. He toured the front line in a command car which flew a three-star pennant of a lieutenant general in bold disregard of any personal danger from snipers.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

INSIDE FACT is that despite Jesse Jones' bull-voiced demands for a congressional investigation of his row with Vice President Wallace, his close friends were trying to calm him down and urged that an investigation should be the last thing he wanted.

They know what apparently he did not know, that there were a lot of documents in the files which wouldn't look so good if spread on the record before Congress.

For instance, on July 5 he issued a blast against the Vice President contending that Wallace's Board of Economic Warfare had held up the over-all agreement with Peru. This, he said, had expired in September, 1942, and because of BEW stalling, Jesse asserted, it had not yet been renewed.

However, Jesse apparently did not know that his own Assistant Secretary of Commerce and right hand man, Will Clayton, had written a letter to the BEW asking that the Peruvian agreement not be renewed. Clayton wrote the letter on April 3, 1943, stating that Warren Lee Pierson, another of Jesse Jones' right hand men, had just come back from Peru with the latest information and that the matter should be held up.

Presumably Jesse did not know what his own chief assistants were doing when he made the charge against the Vice President.

This is one of the chief complaints against the Secretary of Commerce, who personally is considered one of the most likeable men in Washington. "Uncle Jesse" has a host of friends, but he also has about as many jobs as he has friends, and it is humanly impossible for any man to handle so many at one time.

If "Uncle Jesse" stuck to his knitting as Secretary of Commerce, which Herbert Hoover made one of the most important Cabinet jobs in Washington, he probably would rank with Hoover as one of the best Secretaries of Commerce in recent history. But when he sets up a dozen and one different agencies—Rubber Reserve, War Damage, Petroleum Reserves, Defense Supplies, Metals Reserve, War Damage, etc.—then no man, no matter who he be, can keep track of them all.

Labor to the Polls

The A. F. of L. and C. I. O. have long been at swords points on a lot of things, but one thing is now drawing them together—the antistrike bill.

Behind the scenes a lot of political cooperation is being planned for the autumn of 1944.

Both big labor groups are boiling mad over the antistrike bill and determined to get revenge on every Congressman who voted for it. Under the bill they cannot contribute to the campaign fund of a political party, but this does not prevent them from organizing their own political workers and waging their own campaign for any candidate.

Already plans are being laid to do this very thing. First campaign will be to register every labor voter, especially those who have moved to new war plants and shipbuilding areas.

Second move will be to set up headquarters for or against prolabor and antilabor Congressmen. The last election saw labor generally apathetic. That has now disappeared. The plans are to get out and ring doorbells, distribute literature, set up poll-watchers, carry voters to the polls and buy radio time and newspaper advertising for and against Congressmen according to their labor record.

Nothing can prevent any citizen from buying advertising space or making a speech, or contributing his services to a candidate. And the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. plan to pool their efforts in each community in the biggest burst of political activity the Nation has seen.

NOTE.—That is what is behind the big C. I. O. meeting in Philadelphia on Saturday.

Money Changers

THE INGRATIATING public relations expert of the Pennsylvania Railroad slid smoothly among newsmen during the recent ICC hearing which deliberated the railroad's right to issue bonds through Kuhn, Loeb without competitive bidding.

Perhaps this was why a certain salient fact brought out at the hearing failed to reach the public.

This was: the strange circumstance by which nine directors of the Pennsylvania were in a position where their own investment companies would profit from purchase of the bonds.

In other words, the railroad voted to issue $28,483,000 of bonds through Kuhn, Loeb, despite the fact that Halsey, Stuart of Chicago and Otis & Co. of Cleveland were ready to buy the bonds at par, which, they declared, would save the railroad about $580,000.

However, the Pennsylvania directors voted to get less money for the bonds. If the railroad got less money, the financial houses who bought the bonds would have to pay less. It was a better buy for them. And nine Pennsylvania directors—a majority—serve as directors or executives of investment houses or other concerns which are interested in purchasing "bargain" bonds.

Here is the line-up:

1. The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. was scheduled to buy one million dollars of bonds through Kuhn, Loeb. It has six of its directors on the board of the Pennsylvania Railroad: Thomas Newhall, James E. Gowan, T. S. Gates, L. T. Beale, M. W. Clement (who is president of the railroad) and R. T. McCracken.

2. The Mellon Securities Corp. was scheduled to buy $1,700,000 of the new bond issue. R. K. Mellon, nephew of the late Secretary of the Treasury, is a director of the Pennsylvania and also 50 per cent owner of Mellon securities.

3. The Girard Trust Co. is scheduled to take $305,000 of the new bond issue, and four of its officials also are directors of the Pennsylvania: James E. Gowan, president of Girard; M. W. Clement, C. J. Ingersoll and W. S. Franklin.

4. The Prudential Insurance Co. is scheduled to take $2,395,000 of the new issue. Its president, Franklin D'Olier, is also a director of the Pennsylvania.

These interested directors accepted the Kuhn, Loeb bid proposal without competitive bidding and despite the fact that Halsey Stuart and Otis & Co. were offering a better price.

Now the Interstate Commerce Commission is deliberating as to whether the Kuhn, Loeb deal should be set aside. Upon the outcome depends the whole question of whether the competitive bidding reforms proposed by F. D. R. back in the New Deal days will be adopted by the railroads or dropped like a hot potato.

Nots—Prudential, Penn Mutual and Girard Trust stood to make about $1 on every $100 worth of Pennsylvania bonds they bought. But the Mellon Securities Corp., of which Col. Dick Mellon and his sister are sole owners, stood to make $2.50 on each $100, because the Mellon company would get a commission as part of the selling group and also as a subunderwriter. In other words, Colonel Mellon, as a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was in a position where he could vote to benefit himself and sister to the tune of $42,500, partly at the expense of the railroad.

President Expected To Beard 'Grumblers' In Congress Recess

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The President may take the war on the home front directly to the country during the two-month Congressional recess.

The above headline, relating to the coming action by the President, appeared in The Post Tuesday morning.

assistance to the new director of Economic Warfare.

"The director will find the affairs of all RFC agencies engaged in foreign purchases, as well as the Export-Import Bank, in excellent condition. He will find the organizations functioning with a maximum of efficiency and at a minimum of expense.

"The President could not have selected a better qualified man for the important assignment of director of the Office of Economic Warfare than Leo T. Crowley. Mr. Crowley is well and favorably known to the business and financial world because of his able administration of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and as Alien Property Custodian."

The Chicago Sun last night reported it had learned that Milo Perkins, executive director of BEW "had been given the choice of resigning from the BEW or being fired."

Perkins was reported to have addressed 1700 of BEW's 4000 employes at a "pep" meeting Wednesday, praising the Vice President's actions in making the fight on Jones' policies and making many caustic references to Jones. He is reported to have said that "whatever happens at the top, and I don't think anything will happen, BEW is going on."

When Stephen Early, presidential secretary, made public Mr. Roosevelt's letters and order he declined to amplify on them. Thus it was left in doubt whether Crowley would continue as alien property custodian and head of the FDIC, in addition to taking over the new job.

Crowley, 53-year-old bachelor, has been connected with the Administration since 1934, when he came from the chairmanship of the Wisconsin Banking Review Board to become head of the FDIC.

In addition to being alien prop-FDIC job, he is chairman and president of the Standard Gas & Electric Co. He accepts no salary from the Government.

A white-haired man of medium height, he is one of the most engaging figures in Washington but even before the war found little time for social life.

Presidential Rebuke Casts Doubt on Wallace's '44 Role

The political future of Vice President Henry A. Wallace was very much in doubt last night.

The tousle-headed, idealistic Iowan, who was nominated to be President Roosevelt's running mate in 1940 by a reluctant Democratic National Convention, has now been rebuked by the President along with Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones for carrying on an "acrimonious public debate."

To the politically-minded in Washington, this raised a number of questions. The first was whether President Roosevelt would have taken this action if he had Wallace in mind for running mate again in '44—assuming of course, that the President plans to run again next year.

Many Foes in Party

Another question was whether the President, assuming that he would want Wallace again, would be able to dictate his nomination at the next Democratic National Convention as he did in 1940. The Iowan has many foes in the Democratic Party, particularly in the South, and some of these have long been urging that he be dumped overboard.

In reproaching the Vice President and abolishing his Board of Economic Warfare, President Roosevelt said that there was no time now to decide who was right—Wallace or Jones. He also said that he knew the American people would understand that both men had tried to do their duty as they saw it.

Plenty of Ammunition

Still, the other things the President said provided plenty of ammunition for those Democrats who would ditch Wallace in 1944, and they are expected to use it if it is needed.

Should Mr. Roosevelt try for a fourth term, as most politicians now expect he will, and should he have a new man on the ticket with him, it would be his third running mate in the presidential sweepstakes.

John Nance Garner had the role twice. He broke with the President in advance of the 1940 convention, and has since been in retirement at Uvalde, Tex.

The Chicago Sun said in a Washington dispatch that "Wallace was reported to have known he had been ditched by the President, and that that was the reason why he jumped on Jones."

Marines Down 13 Jap Planes With 88 Rounds

South Pacific Headquarters, July 15 (AP).—Marine Corps antiaircraft gunners protecting Rendova Island used only 88 rounds of ammunition to shoot down 12 Japanese bombers and 1 Zero on the afternoon of July 4, setting what is believed to be a record for economy of fire.

Sergt. William S. Frank, a marine combat correspondent, said the guns got the range with their first bursts, and within a few minutes had destroyed all but four in a formation of 16 fighter-escorted bombers. American fighter planes knocked down the rest.

The antiaircraft battery commander, Capt. William M. Tracy of Greenwich, Conn., said of the incident: "I had a hard time making my boys cease firing."

Tanks Fought to Standstill by U. S. Parachute Troops

manding all approaches, 47-millimeter guns and machine-guns, and a great deal of wire.

But the troopers had come to kill, and they did. Their anti-tank weapons and grenades drove the gunners from the slits of the pillboxes to be rushed. Well-aimed Garand rifle fire often accomplished the same purpose and within a short while each pillbox surrendered its load of Italians or a few Germans.

That was along the beaches. Inland the fighting continued throughout the day.

Our own group by daylight had increased, including this correspondent and two medical officers, also unarmed, who had been "sweated out" in the dark hours together, to 25 assorted troopers.

Jump Ready for Action

And here it might be pointed out that every man who jumps, with the above exceptions, jumps ready to fight, whether he's a cook, company clerk, a rigger or one of the service command, and they fought hard and viciously.

Our executive officer had joined up with us, and at his command we moved off in column, with flanking scouts, intending to swing north around Vittoria. That was a day we won't soon forget, particularly this reporter, who had seldom walked more than two miles at a time at home.

The Sicilian countryside was beautiful in its green and yellow colors. Most of the natives greeted us in friendly fashion as we passed, offering wine, water or bread. We trudged along under a hot sun, over plowed fields, through vineyards, grain stubble and cane brakes, and along dusty limestone roads until we got to the outskirts of Vittoria in the morning.

Typewriter Landed

My typewriter, a secondhand portable weighing at least 15 pounds, had been safely dropped in a parachute bundle and recovered. Under the command of a sturdy sergeant major we had gotten the load this far.

Just as we reached the outskirts of the town which we learned contained an Italian garrison, snipers opened up on our scouts a few yards ahead of me. We beat a hasty withdrawal behind a stone fence and there my typewriter was left hidden among the rocks—later to be stolen while the troopers fought back and then withdrew to a point south around Vittoria.

It was march, march, march all afternoon and part of the night until we made a bivouac. A parachutist carries no blankets or clothing other than his jump suit, but despite the chilliness of this country we slept and at dawn were off again.

Far out of town we encountered our colonel and a small party preparing to attack the enemy holding the hill up a road 29 kilometers out of Gela.

Attack Armored Force

Our own group had increased in force. It fought a hard battle to accomplish its original mission.

Despite the smallness of his force the colonel went into position on the lower hill in the orchard and then began working through the tall grass, gnarled little trees and vineyards.

The armored grenadiers—for that is what the opposition proved to be—fought back with their fast-firing machineguns, Mausers, artillery and mortars.

Our first rush shoved the enemy back up and over the hill altogether. He outnumbered us then about three to one. The troopers had him on the run, but we came back strong with more artillery fire and then tanks, not only Mark IV's, but his huge Mark VI Tiger tanks mounting 88-millimeter guns in the turret.

The next hour was our worst. Everyone expected an attack by the tanks in force and it looked as if there were a good chance that we would be over-run. The colonel had sent word by a runner to task force headquarters, saying:

"If you want this position held we must have more fire power. But whatever happens we aren't moving off this hill."

He and his staff were dug into foxholes while the command post was under heavy fire. One staff member, Capt. A. W. Ireland of Baltimore, took 10 men to the right flank with orders to hold at all costs. Another held the left flank.

He waited, this reporter being some 100 yards to the rear sheltered by a culvert while the roar of enemy tank engines grew louder.

Out in front the parachutists kept up a constant fire. The crews knocked out two Mark IV's, but other crews were blown up. One youngster, after capturing a small Italian tank similar to the British Bren gun carrier, charged off in it with the avowed purpose of "scaring those blanks." A direct hit killed him.

Then the colonel called on his last hope and ordered three available howitzers wheeled up for direct fire. I saw one gun come up this hill into position.

Tank Attack Stopped

One trooper rode its barrel while others muscled the piece up the slope to a ridge beside a small white stone house. The tanks began registering hits all around the gun almost immediately, but with the coolness of veterans these men placed their gun.

They opened fire at 1800 yards, knocking out two tanks.

By this time higher headquarters had brought up some 105's which were firing rapidly, and the tank attack was stopped. By evening more troopers had arrived and the colonel ordered a counterattack in order to recover our dead and wounded. Then, as in the last minutes of a Hollywood ending, came our General Sherman tanks and some half-tracks towing anti-tank guns. You could hear the parachute troopers' cheer even above the clatter of the tanks.

At 8:10 our tanks opened fire and we charged in two waves while the Germans replied with intense mortar fire and sweeping machine-gun fire. Overhead their Messerschmitts prowled to observe or strafe.

Ricocheting bullets sang their bee-like song of death past my culvert while shell fragments whirled through the air. Half an hour later it was quiet. And in the gloom of the gathering night our men came back to their lines while the tanks withdrew, having destroyed from the rear a huge Tiger tank.

We counted many dead and wounded but it was a victory beyond question.

The attack had driven the enemy off his hill back through the village and he had abandoned tons of equipment. In fact, reconnaissance later showed he retreated completely from this sector.

As a result the combat team of this task force which had been held up by the enemy's strong point was able to push on through in the same manner as the parachutists' attack on pillboxes and the rear areas had enabled the combat team on the southern flank to advance.

There was another contributing element. The enemy's huge pillboxes and strong points protecting high ground from the west had, during the height of the battle, come under fire of heavy naval guns and one of our warships.

Fire of these guns was directed by radio from two young naval ensigns who had jumped with us and who had been out in front in the worst fighting all day.

That was yesterday and today the men are resting, reorganizing and often eating for the first time. You find during the fierce throb of battle that hunger is nonexistent, but it comes back once you've had a chance to relax.

3000 Attend Sikorski Mass

London, July 15 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill and Mrs. Churchill joined 3000 others in paying tribute to the late Premier Wladyslaw Sikorski of the Polish government in exile at a solemn requiem mass in Westminster Cathedral today.

Detachments of Polish regiments with flags stood at each side of the coffin, which was guarded by Polish soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Plows Under Crop To Show Protest Against Rationing

Owosso, Mich., July 15 (AP).—Harold S. Kline, chairman of the Shiawassee County Farm War Board, said today that Robert Hudson, Bennington township farmer who last week announced he had plowed under a 30-acre hay crop as a protest against the Government's farm machinery rationing program, never had applied for a permit to buy a hay loader or grain binder.

Hudson said last week that because he was unable to get a loader, his only alternative was to plow the hay under.

Kline said purchase certificates for a new tractor, plow and cultivator had been issued to Hudson this spring and that all this equipment was delivered to him.

Sure, you like Beef
—but right now, because more beef is needed for war, your red ration stamps will go further if you ask for Pork, Lamb or Sausage

The recent increase in beef point values was intended to get people to eat less beef, so the armed forces could get enough.

• War is a great beef eater. New methods of boning, freezing and shipping beef to America's fighting men have made it one of the most practical and highly demanded of all fighting foods.

• When your mouth is watering for a good steak, which you may not be able to get, remember that no man ever turned up his nose at barbecued spareribs, a hearty lamb stew with dumplings, ham hocks, lamb patties, liver sausage on rye, or a platter of cold cuts.

• Remember, every cut of meat from the royal rib roast to the most democratic soup meat has the biologically complete proteins which the whole nutritional world is stressing these days.

• Every cut of meat also contains essential B vitamins (thiamine, riboflavin, niacin) and important minerals (iron, copper, phosphorus).

• Remember, high ration point value is no guide to nutritional value. All meats contain the same nutrients.

• If we can't get beef, let's be glad we can get some of these other meats practically all of the time.

Sausage Simple to serve—all food—no waste—nutritious.

Variety Meats Unusually rich source of important nutrients.

Look to Lamb for nutritious, tender and delicately flavored meat.
The nutritional essentials of meat (proteins, B vitamins, minerals) are not stored in the body to any appreciable extent. They must be supplied in the daily foods we eat.

QUESTIONS OF THE DAY ON MEAT
Q. What should I pay for Meat?
A. Don't go over the ceiling prices set by the government. These prices, cut by cut, are displayed in your meat market, where you can see them. Your meat-man should not ask more than the ceiling; you should not pay more. If you do, you are helping the Black Market.
Q. What is "playing ball" with ration stamps?
A. These are the three Honor Rules of red ration stamps—
1. Don't buy any meat without proper number of stamps.
2. Destroy unused or expired stamps.
3. These stamps are yours to use—not yours to give or sell.
Q. Can't I get along with less meat in hot weather?
A. This notion has been completely disproved by modern nutrition, which teaches that protein requirements do not vary appreciably, regardless of season, temperature or climate. The human body is the same summer and winter. Its protein needs are the same, whether you sit at a desk or work in a garden.
Q. What do you mean by "making the most of meat"?
A. It means a sharp knife and cutting the pieces thinner.
It means everybody cleaning the plate every time.
It means looking on leftover meat as a basic treasury of future meals.
It means a lot more "part-meat" dishes—extending the flavor and nutrients of meat through meat stews, meat pies, croquettes, casserole dishes and other good old-fashioned thrift dishes which the war has brought to modern tables.

Ickes Hesitates To Turn Mines Back Now

Interior Secretary Ickes said yesterday it was "not practicable" to return the Nation's coal mines to private ownership at present, even though production is approaching normal and between 97 and 98 per cent of hard and soft coal miners are back on their jobs.

Simultaneously, he expressed the opinion that Government operation of the mines was beneficial to the private owners because, he observed, the Government was able to get miners while the private owners couldn't, and therefore was protecting their investment.

The Government mine operations chief said also that the anti-strike law had "many vague points," particularly with regard to provisions for restoration of property seized by the Government, and that he had asked advice of his lawyers and "might or might not" consult the Justice Department in this connection.

Reads Section of Law

Ickes, like President Roosevelt, read to a press conference a section of the new law providing that the Government should restore properties it seizes "as soon as practicable, but in no event more than 60 days after restoration of productive efficiency . . ."

Then, answering a question, he said it was "not practicable now" to restore the mines. Although he did not amplify, it appeared he was taking into consideration John L. Lewis' threat of another walkout by the United Mine Workers if the mines are turned back to the private owners before October 31.

Ickes said hard and soft coal were being produced now at the rate of 12 million tons a week, close to normal, but added that weekly production of about 13 million tons must be attained to make up the 25 million tons he said were lost due to the three general strikes and various scattered walkouts.

Insurgent Strike Collapses

Pittsburgh, July 15 (AP).—The insurgent coal strike in southwestern Pennsylvania collapsed today as a Federal grand jury continued an investigation to determine who was responsible for continuing the walkout which began June 20.

Two mass meetings, with United Mine Workers locals from the dozen mines which had remained idle represented, voted unaimously yesterday and last night to resume work today. All but about 3500 of the final 10,000 holdouts went back yesterday.

"I have been called down to Pittsburgh by the FBI," Anthony Congelio, president of the local at the Isabella mine of the Weirton Steel Co., told the mass meeting at Isabella, near Uniontown. "The Government means business. My own intentions are to go back to work."

Members of the 900-strong Isabella local who quit work even before the general walkout had refused to work "without a contract" and once so telegraphed President Roosevelt.

Under the 20-day-old Connally-Smith antistrike measure, any person causing a work stoppage in Government-operated plants is subject to criminal penalties.

Coffee Rollback Millions May Be Shifted To Subsidize Canned Vegetable Price Cuts

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

A subsidized rollback of canned vegetable prices may be substituted for the proposed coffee subsidy, if increased coffee supplies due to improved shipping result in a natural reduction of the cost of that beverage item, Price Administrator Prentiss Brown said yesterday.

Brown said he took the viewpoint Congress would not object to a substitute rollback subsidy costing no more than the coffee venture, or around $36,000,000.

As far as he and War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes are concerned, he said, this would be the last such program "unless it is asked by the President."

"Congress Will Not Mind"

"We consider we have 450 million (RFC funds) to spend on such programs and that Congress will not mind how we spend it," he said. "Commodity Credit Corp. funds, however, will not be spent for this but to carry on usual CCC activities."

Which canned vegetables might be selected for the rollback he said he did not know. The four major packs of tomatoes, snap beans, peas and sweet corn already are subsidized by CCC in a program costing 25 million dollars annually for materials plus a canning wage subsidy that will cost probably three million dollars.

The price administrator said bread prices would not be permitted to rise and that a subsidy would be used to hold them back, if necessary.

Pleased With Results

Declaring himself well pleased with the manner in which food prices have been kept down during this war, he said ceilings already announced by OPA plus the additional canned vegetable proposal would put the cost of living index at "pretty close to the levels of last September 15."

He admitted the natural abundance of summer vegetables is working in OPA's favor and that more pressure from fresh vegetables and fruits can be exerted next winter. He indicated that when this pressure came he would "see whether Congress wants to give us the money to turn back the pressure."

"It was Congress that set September 15 as the price control date," he said.

OPA is not intending, at present, to impose price ceilings on live beef animals but is consulting with War Food Administrator Jones on the question of ceilings on live hogs.

"More beef animals are coming to market, and corn also is coming to market. I think the uncertainty caused by Congress during its last few weeks was the major factor in keeping these from moving. Farmers, being businessman, did not want to market when the prospect of higher prices seemed clear," he said.

63% for Civilians

Meantime, the WFA yesterday allocated the Nation's meat supply for the next 12 months—allowing civilians 63 out of every 100 pounds or enough to allow continuation of meat rationing "at about the present level."

Other food developments during the day included:

OPA set price ceilings for processors of peaches, pears, plums, and prunes grown on the Pacific Coast and announced a marketing program designed to limit the amounts of these fruits going into fresh channels. The Government will purchase the entire pack of processed free-stone peaches, it was announced, and will allow wage rate increases for the canning of all four fruits.

These increases will not be applied to ceiling prices paid by civilians, but will be financed by the CCC under provisions of its "hardship" clause.

Ceilings on fresh peaches, pears, plums, and prunes marketed in fresh channels will be announced soon, OPA said.

Yanks Worst Nazi Tanks; Knock Out 14

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gela, Sicily, July 12 (Delayed).—A tank officer described today how three American tanks and an artillery battery knocked out 14 of 30 attacking German tanks and kept them from overrunning vital landing beaches.

"They almost got away with it," said Lieut. Col. Briard Johnson of North Amherst, Mass., executive officer of the American command post which was directly in the path of the charging tanks east of Gela.

Landing Force Periled

"A few already had cut across the main coastal road when we went into action," continued Johnson. "If they had ever got to the shore they would have been in position to capture our supply dumps, shoot up unloading crews and even lay fire on our main transport force in the harbor."

But before they could reach their objective they were intercepted by a platoon of Sherman tanks whose daredevil stand was helped by thunderous blasts from a battery of 105 howitzers which were designed for other purposes than pot-shooting at tanks.

"They just turned down their muzzles and began laying shells directly in among the tanks advancing over the plain," said Johnson. They were only three-quarters of a mile from the landing beach, so we couldn't waste time or miss many shots.

Howitzers Knock Them Out

"One howitzer used as an anti-tank gun did phenomenal work in knocking out five or six Mark III and Mark IV tanks alone. All the time the artillery was drumming in its big shells, our tanks were boring in at closer range.

"It was meant to be an attack in force—the Germans don't throw that many tanks around casually—but they couldn't stand up under our combined fire. They broke and made for the shelter of buildings and trees, firing back all the time with their 75-mm guns.

"The battle lasted about an hour and then the Germans began to retreat. They tried to get away under cover of smoke from their own burning tanks, but our Shermans kept picking them off one after another. When the firing finally stopped there were 14 Nazi tanks smoldering in the fields. They didn't get a single tank of ours, and we had no casualties. It was a clean-cut victory."

Stimson Decorates Sergeant for Fire Fighting on Plane

By Bob Considine
International News Service Staff Writer

A Fortress Station, Somewhere in England, July 15 (INS).—United States Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson today tied the Nation's highest military award, the blue ribbon of the Congressional Medal of Honor, around the neck of little Staff Sergt. Maynard Smith in a dramatic ceremony on this wind-swept field.

Smith is the second man to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor in the European war theater and is the only one living. Sergt. Smith, who now rates a 17-gun salute and a guard of honor, was decorated with the rarely bestowed honor for extreme heroism during the May 1 Fortress attack on German U-boat pens at St. Nazaire.

(Smitty may rate a salute today, but only yesterday he was doing a soldier's hardest job—K. P.—as punishment for overstaying a leave pass.)

The things that happened to him and the plane read like an improbable movie thriller. For an hour and a half of hell on the way home from St. Nazaire, Smith single-handedly fought off Focke-Wulf fighters, beat out a fire which drove three men out of the plane to their deaths and saved the life of the tail gunner through first-aid.

Gun Mountings Melted

The blaze in the bomber was so fierce it melted the gun mountings, cameras and other equipment and threatened to melt the plane in half. But thanks to the resourcefulness of Smith—whose life's ambition is to play 12 months of golf a year—it reached England in one piece.

After the 75-year-old Secretary of War had shaken his hand for the third time and called his performance "an inspiration to the armed forces," Smith told his story.

"We had left St. Nazaire and headed out to sea with some Focke-Wulfs tailing us," Smitty related. "Suddenly there was a terrific explosion—'whoompf' just like that. Boy, it was a rip. My interphone and electrical controls for my turret went out, so I hand-cranked myself up and crawled into the ship.

"The first thing I saw was a sheet of flame coming out of the radio room, and then another fire by the tailwheel section. Suddenly the radio operator came staggering out of the flames, made a bee line for the gun hatch, and dived out.

"I watched him hit the horizontal stabilizer, bounce off and open his chute. Poor guy didn't even have a Mae West (life preserver) on, I think it had burned off.

"By this time the right waist gunner bailed out over his gun and the left waistgunner was trying to jump, but got stuck half way out and half in. I pulled him back into the ship, helped him open the rear escape door and watched him bail out over the water.

"I wrapped that gunner's sweater around by face so I could breathe, grabbed the fire extinguisher and attacked the fire in the radio room. Glancing over my shoulder at the tail fire I saw Gibson (Staff Sergt. Roy Gibson of San Diego, Calif.) our tail gunner, painfully crawling toward me. He had blood all over him. I saw that he was hit in the back by a bullet that probably went on through his left lung. I laid him down on his left side so the wound wouldn't drain into the right lung and gave him a shot of morphine."

"Starting back toward the fire I saw a Focke-Wulf coming in again. I grabbed one of the waistguns and fired at him as he swept under us. Then I turned to the other waist-gun on the left and let him have it on that side.

"He left us for a while so I went back to the radio room again. I got into the room this time and began throwing out the burning debris. The fire had burned large holes in the ship so I just tossed the stuff out through them. The gas from the burning extinguisher chemicals started to choke me so I went back to the tail fire.

"Then I took off my parachute so I could move around easier. I'm glad I didn't take it off sooner because I found out later it had stopped a 30-caliber bullet. I alternated between the two fires, firing at the Focke-Wulf everytime he came by.

"When the fire extinguishers were finished I found a water bottle and a water can and poured these on the fires. After that I was so mad I finally beat it with my hands and feet until my clothes began to smolder.

"That Focke-Wulf came around again then and I let him have it until he left us for good. By this time we were in sight of land.

"Lieutenant Johnson (Lewis "Baby" Johnson of Crummies, Ky.), brought the ship in okay and by the time we stopped rolling I had the fires completely out. It was a miracle the ship didn't break in two in the air."

Smitty, as the boys call him, accepted calmly the high words of Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Maj. Gen. Ira C. Baker, Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, Brig. Gen. Frederick H. Anderson and Brig. Gen. C. M. Thiele.

At last Smitty escaped and quickly asked for and got a pass. Then he went to the nearest village pub with a mob of his mates.

8 Navy Fliers Die in Vain Effort To Rescue RAF Crash Survivors

Eight of the nine-man crew of a Navy patrol bomber died in the far North Atlantic, the Navy reported yesterday, in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue survivors of an R. A. F. crash.

The men of the Royal Air Force, afloat in a dinghy, were rescued later by a British seaplane patrolling from the British Isles.

The story of the deaths and the rescue of the lone survivor, afloat on a raft for seven days, was told in an extraordinarily detailed account of the hardship and suffering that often dog the men who keep the Atlantic sea lanes safe for movements of supplies to the war zones.

The story started June 11 when a United States naval air station in the North Atlantic received a message reporting: "Sighted R. A. F. dinghy one hour ago. Plane crew looks okay." Then: "We are going down for the landing now."

In a short time the men at the air station realized that something had gone wrong. To the search for the R. A. F. dinghy was added an anxious hunt for the patrol plane's crew.

On the seventh day of hunting, an American minesweeper picked up a life raft carrying L. F. Pellitier, aviation radioman, first class, of Fall River, Mass., only survivor of the patrol planes, and the body of O. A. Chaney, aviation ordnanceman, third class, of Tarentum, Pa.

Pellitier related that the dinghy had been sighted on a heavy sea with the weather closing in fast. Lieut. (j.g.) Douglas S. Vieira of Myrtle Beach, S. C., decided to take a chance in putting his plane down lest the rescue never be made. But midway in the alighting a cross wave hooked a wing-tip and swung the big boat into an adjoining wave, splitting her bow.

The crew of nine manned two rubber life rafts.

The R. A. F men paddled over to offer what assistance they could, but heavy seas soon separated them from the rubber boats. The misery of freezing wetness joined hunger and thirst. The first evening two men died. Three more died next day. The third day the survivors saw flares and thought they heard a plane—possibly the craft which rescued the R. A. F. men.

The fourth day two more men died and on the sixth Chaney succumbed, leaving only Pellitier. Those aboard the plane in addition to Vieira, Pellitier and Chaney were listed by the Navy as:

Lieut. (j g.) Phillip A. Bodinett, Chicago; Lieut. (j. g.) Frank Kleinbrink, Ortego, Mich.; Fred A. Cernek, aviation chief machinist's mate, Palisades, N. J.; Luther W. Provow, avaition machinist's mate, first class, Richlands, N. C.; James E. Peoples, avaition radioman, second class, Elizabethton, Tenn.; Charles H. Baker, aviation radioman, third class, Bangor, Me.

was made on an 18-mile front in another breakthrough.

Already 3 Days Old

The Russians sprang their drive three days ago, exactly one week after the Germans began their drive, which has cost them staggering losses.

While launching their own offensive the Russians at the same time continued to repulse German attacks in the Belgorod area to the south.

(The regular midnight Moscow bulletin, issued after the special communique, said the Germans hurled more men and tanks into the Belgorod fight but failed to make a breakthrough. One Soviet formation in that zone destroyed 51 tanks and wiped out 2000 troops in Thursday's fighting.

("The enemy, bled white, was forced to pass to the defensive" in the sector between Kursk and Orel, added the bulletin, recorded by the Soviet monitor.)

Procedure Reversed

Last year the Germans waited while the Russians attacked against Kharkov in an offensive begun May 12. Five days later, after stopping the Russians, the Germans began their own push which smashed through to Voronezh and on to Stalingrad.

This summer the Russians have reversed the procedure.

(The special Russian announcement was keyed in closely with the recent reversal in the trend of German comment on the situation on the Eastern Front, where Adolf Hitler was reported by some sources to have first taken over and then quickly given up the direction of the apparently ill-starred German summer offensive.

(The past two days the Germans have reported tremendous battles, with the Russians throwing huge reserves into the fight in a determined bid to take over the initiative.

(The German high command's Thursday communique, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said that "heavy fighting is being continued on the Eastern Front despite increasingly worse weather conditions."

(The weather, used frequently by the Germans as an excuse for military failures, has been blamed several times this week in Berlin radio accounts.)

thought Bowles would accept the post and would begin work early next month after completing his vacation.

Asked to comment on Maxon's assertion that OPA was in need of "drastic reorganization," Brown disclosed that he has had a reorganization report in his office for some weeks now, but has been unable to do anything with it because of his recent hospitalization for a minor operation and because of his frequent appearances before Congress.

The price administrator declared that he "looks for many changes" in OPA, primarily because of recent legislation requiring OPA policy-making officials to have had business experience. Brown stressed, however, that an agency like OPA should also have policy makers "who have been trained in institutions' 'and thus can offer a special perspective to pricing methods.

While defending the so-called "professors" who have drawn the fire of Congress as well as Maxon, Brown said he intended to abide by the wishes of Congress and will call in a number of businessmen to help OPA with price regulations.

Smilingly taking up the issue of grade labeling, Brown declared that the country's future was not entirely based on this matter despite avowed beliefs to that effect by Maxon, who fought grade labeling against former OPA Price Chief J. Kenneth Galbraith.

While facetiously asserting that he has yet to receive any bouquets for his work, Brown said that it was his efforts that prevented congressional critics from creating a debacle in OPA during recent legislative hearings.

Other highlights of Brown's press conference were:

1. All future rationing, with the exception of some minor items now under consideration, will be brought before Congress for decision.

2. The price of corn will remain at present levels. Corn is moving, now that congressional "uncertainty" has been removed.

3. Controversial regulations on the sale of women's rayon hosiery have been lifted, with sellers no longer required to mark the hosiery as Grade A or Grade B. Ceiling prices based on gauge or needle count remain.

Another OPA development was the resignation of another "professor," Dextre M. Keezer, deputy administrator in charge of professional services. Keezer, it was said, will join the staff of W. Averell Harriman, lend-lease expeditor in London. Keezer formerly was president of Reed College, Portland, Oreg.

Also announced was that Eliot Marple, former Seattle and Boston newspaperman, will be acting information chief, the post given up by Maxon. When Brown disclosed this at the press conference, newsmen stopped note-taking to applaud.

Plea Radioed For Postwar Education

Calling upon the United Nations to make full use of the "neglected weapon" of education, which has been used by the dictators "with devastating results," Harold Butler, British minister, Dr. Gregor Ziemer, author of "Hitler's Children," and Dr. William G. Carr, secretary, Educational Policies Commission, yesterday joined in a round-table discussion over the Columbia Broadcasting System from radio station WTOP.

"The education for and devotion to peace of the rest of the world was the dictators' greatest asset in their bid for world power," Butler pointed out, in stressing the importance of an international organization to support the postwar educational program for world-wide peace.

He was supported in his view by Dr. Ziemer, who stated that we cannot look at education "apart from the whole social, economic, and political situation of which it is a part."

Dr. Carr, who presided, emphasized that our first job is at home.

"The American people must learn," he said, "that our country has certain obligations. Unless they learn that the real goal of this war, the only goal worthy of its sacrifices is the establishment of a just peace, there isn't much use of talking about an international program of education."

Warning that we should not wait "until everything is settled before we start," Dr. Ziemer commended the plan recently evolved by the Educational Policies Commission, and issued under the title of "Education and the People's Peace."

He advocated an interchange of students and teachers which could be financed with "the cost of one day of war."

Willkie Will Run Again in 1944

alist Party" in American politics—a resolution was adopted urging Colonel McCormick to become a candidate in the Illinois preferential presidential primary. In its declaration of principles, the committee expressed opposition to Willkie.

The resloution as adopted said Colonel McCormick "personifies the American nationalist viewpoint" while Willkie and his followers "are internationalists."

The platform of Willkie at the moment is his book, "One World," which became a best-seller almost overnight and its sales already have pushed beyond the million mark. He wants to continue to carry that theme, as he has been doing, to the Nation's electorate in speeches and articles.

The only Willkie organization at the present time is a force of 15 stenographers and workers busily answering between 2500 and 3000 letters a week at Willkie's law offices. They are being paid from his personal funds, he said. Willkie added that the letters were coming from every State and many from men in the armed services overseas. All of them get replies.

Among the letters are those from Republican leaders. Willkie would say only that he had been assured many State organizations of the party were for him.

Asked whether he would enter other preferential primaries, Willkie said that could be decided later.

regulation by the appropriate governmental agencies.

2. Private ownership and management.

3. Fostering and encouraging by the Government of the United States of a sound world-wide air transportation system.

4. Freedom of transit in peaceful flight—world-wide.

5. Acquisition of civil and commercial outlets required in the public interest.

S. J. Solomon, president of Northeast Airlines and spokesman for the group that drafted the policy declaration, explained that he believed these principles conform "with the traditional American practice of free competition" and serve best the welfare of the public.

W. A. Patterson, president of United Airlines, said his company declined to join with the other airlines when its request was refused "that the reply to the Civil Aeronautics Board would not preclude United from giving serious consideration to jointly financed and operated routes if it should be found that the best interests of the country can be served by such cooperative effort."

Pan-American Airways, which participated in a preliminary conference with American Export Airlines, but did not sign the declaration, had "no comment at this time." The suggested program was under study, a spokesman added.

Pan-American has been operating a global air system for 15 years and was the only American company in the field until two years ago, when American Export received a temporary permit for transatlantic operation. Before the war countries like Britain, France, Holland and Italy, dominating most of the international air traffic, had only one line each, thereby strengthening their hands in international competition.

"To meet the requirements of the domestic and foreign commerce of the United States, the postal service and the national security," and to take advantage of the existing airport facilities, built by our armed forces all over the world, the airlines proposed a network of routes extending:

"1. Between cities of the East Coast of the United States and Canada, certain Atlantic Ocean islands, South America, the British Isles northern, central and southern Europe, the Mediterranean area, Africa and Asia.

"2. Between cities on the West Coast of the United States and Canada, certain islands in the Pacific, New Zealand, Australia, Alaska, Russia, Japan, the East Indies, China and Asia.

"3. Between cities on the northern boundary of he United States and Canada, Alaska, Russia, East Asia, Japan, the Philippine Islands, the East Indies, northern and central Europe, the British Isles and Asia.

"4. Between cities on the southern boundary of the United States and Mexico, Central America, islands of the Caribbean, the Canal Zone, South America and Africa."

Asked whether the request for "freedom of transit" meant freedom for the planes of all nations to fly everywhere they chose—a hotly disputed problem—Solomon declared that freedom of transit should not be mistaken for freedom of the air.

"Freedom of transit merely gives an airline a right to enter a foreign country after a bilateral agreement has been reached and does not give it the right to compete within the boundaries of that foreign country with the domestic lines," he said. "It is, by no means, as all-inclusive as the freedom of the sea, which has been recognized by all nations for centuries."

As for the interpretation of the program as far as it affects relations with foreign powers, Solomon declared the group meant to leave this problem entirely up to the proper authorities of Government and would abide by whatever agreements were reached.

Any intention to deny reciprocity rights to foreign-flag operators, characterized as "self-evident," was disclaimed.

One of the major objectives in developing an international air policy now, it was pointed out, is to "provide employment to as great an extent as possible for the men of the armed forces who will return to civilian life" and to the hundreds of thousands now engaged in aircraft production.

The statement was signed by officials of the American Airlines, Inc.; Braniff Airways, Inc.; Chicago & Southern Airlines, Inc.; Continental Airlines, Inc.; Delta Airlines; Eastern Airlines, Inc.; Inland Airlines, Inc.; Mid-Continent Airlines, Inc.; National Airlines, Inc.; Northeast Airlines, Inc.; Northwest Airlines, Inc.; Pennsylvania-Central Airlines Corp., Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc.; Western Airlines, Inc.; All American Aviation, Inc., and Colonial Airlines.

A spokesman for the railroad said no passengers were hurt. He identified the fireman as Thomas Broadstock, 58, and the engineer as Samuel Evans, 60, both of Cumberland, Md.

Both tracks of the main line were blocked by the cars.

Poles, French, Slavs Found In Nazi Ranks

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press.

Licata, Sicily, July 13 (Delayed). Young Poles, Yugoslavs and Frenchmen with no battle experience are being thrown into the front lines in Sicily by the Nazis, who are so desperately short of manpower they are using any kind of military scrap materials to try to delay the Allied advance.

One group of eight German army prisoners resting under the trees of a small Sicilian park serving as a prison bull pen included a Pole who once had fought against Germany in the Polish army and another Pole who had a brother in a German concentration camp. There were four other Poles and two Yugoslavs 18 and 19 years old.

The Yugoslavs and some of the Poles had come to Sicily only a month ago and had never fought before. They were pushed into action two days ago.

"We had two Frenchmen here a little while ago who had fought in the French army until it fell in 1940," said Sergt. Fred D. Weatherford of Winnsboro, Tex. "They told us the Germans had drafted them into their army eight months ago. They were in the infantry and as soon as some Italian tanks near them were driven away they gave up. They expressed hatred of the Germans and said they had been forced to fight. We also had one Slovakian who said the Germans had compelled him to join the army after killing his father and mother."

Surprise Witness Disputes Viereck

End of Trial Nears; Summations Expected to End Early Today

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

A surprise Government rebuttal witness yesterday contradicted the testimony of George Sylvester Viereck that he "personally" financed widespread propaganda activities to promote an isolationist policy in this country before the outbreak of war.

He was Sanford Griffith, former United States Army major and member of Army Intelligence.

Griffith took the stand shortly after noon and described himself as head of Market Analysts, a firm specializing in industrial and consumer research and public opinion polls.

Talked With Viereck

On April 3, 1940, he told the court, he found himself seated next to Viereck at a luncheon meeting of the Overseas Press Club in New York City. There they struck up a conversation and, on Viereck's suggestion, later adjourned to the bar to continue their talk, Griffith stated.

The jury of nine men and three women listened intently as the witness replied to questioning by Federal Prosecutor George A. McNulty.

Viereck did, Griffith asserted, tell him the following:

That the German government was prepared to "spend plenty of money" to get accurate analyses of American public opinion polls and polls of "special" groups whose opinions were of "patriotic interest" to Germany;

That he, Viereck, had "unlimited funds" for "various projects";

That he was going to Washington the following day to get an "added appropriation";

And that he could obtain and had obtained money from the German Embassy to finance his activities.

Some suggestion also was made by Viereck that Griffith give his services to the "work," the witness declared.

Denied by Defendant

These allegations Viereck had previously denied from the witness stand. Of Griffith, he had declared that he "contrived to set next to me" and "attempted to draw me" into conversation.

"I thought he probably was working for the British or American secret service," Viereck recalled.

With final redirect examination of the defendant by Attorney Leo A. Rover, the trial slowly drew to a close.

Federal Prosecutor Albert E. Arent delivered a summation reviewing the Government's case against the German agent with which it hopes to convict him on six violations of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

In his closing statement, which will be concluded this morning, defense counsel Rover appealed to the jury to "reorientate" itself back to the days before Pearl Harbor, to maintain a calm, unprejudiced attitude toward the evidence and the defendant.

Pointing to Viereck, his attorney urged the jury to bear in mind "he is not charged with disloyalty to America, on the face of the evidence," and "he is not charged with sabotage or espionage . . . or interfering with the war effort."

Failure Explained

"He did not disclose (to the State Department when he registered as an agent for the German Library of Information and correspondent for the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten the fact he was the agent of the German Foreign Office, because that was not the fact," Rover emphasized.

There was nothing in his reports to his Munich editor (addressed to German Ambassador to the United States Hans Diekhoff in Berlin, but meant, Viereck insists, for his editor) that could be characterized in any way except as the work of a journalist reporting from abroad, Rover continued.

And Viereck's comments in these reports were no different than the kind found in columns by Dorothy Thompson and Walter Lippmann. "making suggestions on phases of the war," the attorney said.

The testimony of two Government witnesses especially should be "carefully considered," Rover cautioned the jurors. They were Miss Spardell and Otto Borsdorf, formerly secretary and receptionist, respectively, to German Consul General Hans Borchers in New York.

Evidence Appraised

These witnesses had earlier described Viereck as a frequent caller at the consulate and recipient of regular messages and money from Borchers.

But they are now German citizens on American soil, he declared, and because they want to obtain American citizenship, "they naturally want to stay on good terms with the American Government." This was not meant as any reflection on the prosecution, Rover hastened to add several times.

With completion of the defense's closing statement this morning and delivery of the Government's statement by Prosecutor McNulty, the case is expected to be in the hands of the jury by tonight. Extended testimony and cross-examination of Viereck has delayed close of the trial by several days. Justice Bolitha J. Laws, however, is preparing to instruct jurors on the law and the indictment during this afternoon.

German Admits Orel Sector Lost

Moscow, July 15 (INS).—The entire German campaign against Russia for 1943 has ben lost in the Orel sector where the Red Army today started its big offensive, declared a German officer who surrendered with his troops on the day the Sicilian invasion started.

Ober Lieutenant Hans Frankenfeld said he is certain Germany's defeat is inevitable, but that he doesn't know whether it will come in two months, or six, from the east or the west.

When the Stripes are in the Attic . . .

A NEW BATTLE WILL BEGIN

WE were thinking about a soldier named Tim the other day . . . but not in a sticky, sentimental sort of a way.

We were just thinking about the office boy who'll come home a technical sergeant.

You see, we'll owe Tim a job when he gets back. But how the heck are we going to fit a man who has kept a Flying Fortress in fighting trim back into the miniscule responsibilities of sealing letters and running errands?

Obviously, we've got to figure out a wider scope for a Tim who has learned a great deal, not only about machines, but about people.

▶ And how about the girl who has Tim's old job? She is doing all right. Maybe she will get married and quit work when the war is over . . . but then again?

See how our thoughts were running? Two jobs to provide where only one job existed.

If you run a business, or a department, you know the next step in our thinking by heart. Multiply Tim by the number of employees that are in the services, or in government jobs, and add the new people that now have their old jobs, and you will see that this nation faces the greatest opportunity in the history of the world.

If we live up to that opportunity, we will not have 10,000,000 unemployed, with their wonderful training going to waste. Instead we will have a country humming with the released energy of its whole people.

▶ What are we going to do about providing 10,000,000 new jobs when the uniforms are in the attic?

That will be the peacetime battle, and thousands of civilians are now planning its strategy and tactics.

Fortunately, there is a better way to use the energy and skill of our fighters and war workers than putting them on ambition-killing government jobs in some super W. P. A.

American Industry is the best outlet for personal energy and skill.

▶ If you doubt that, remember that our modern industry is little more than 50 years old.

In that short time it has provided more good living for more people than all the centuries and milleniums that went before.

American Industry can give good jobs to every skilled and energetic person who wants to work.

How? By extending the process that produced so much good living for so many in the years gone by.

If that is true, then everybody should understand how industry works, so that the growth of industry can be encouraged.

The purpose of industry is to get more work done in less time.

▶ The life of industry is improvement.

When products are constantly improved (either in appearance, service or price) more and more people buy them. That makes jobs.

When there is no industrial improvement, you have a country with living standards like those in China, or India.

When there is slow industrial improvement, you have a country like, say, one of the Balkan states.

When there is rapid industrial improvement, you have a country like ours, with the highest living standards in the world.

We haven't always understood this, and so we have had periods when there was little new machinery and improvement in plant. That helps cause depressions.

But, remember that the plants which made electric refrigerators, radios, air conditioning and streamlined trains supplied good jobs during the last depression, because those were improved products which people bought in spite of hard times.

We don't need to worry about creating 10 million new jobs, if we give our nation of Eli Whitneys a chance to do their stuff.

▶ Why do we say "give them a chance"?

Because the only chance industry has to improve is through its Seed Money.

As you know, Seed Money is that part of profit which is "ploughed back" into a business in improved factories, machines, methods and products.

As you also know, a very great amount of Seed Money is being taxed out of existence.

We don't think it makes much sense to stunt the growth of industry at a time when 10 million new jobs will be needed, do you?

If you think Congress should look into this matter of providing better conditions for industrial growth, tell your Congressman how you feel.

"Industrial Progress is the Source of all Good Living."

After Martinique

The self-elimination of Admiral Robert as Governor-General of the French Antilles solves one thorny problem with which our Government has been confronted but creates another. It is good to know that the last Vichy citadel in the Western Hemisphere has at last yielded. Under Henri-Etienne Hoppenot, representative of the French Committee of National Liberation, the people of those islands will be able to play their part in the struggle against the Axis. At the same time the change that has occurred at Martinique has brought into sharp focus the equivocal policy we have been pursuing toward France and the French.

At his press conference last Friday, President Roosevelt made the astonishing observation that there is no France because 95 per cent of the French people are today living under German domination. This remark was made in answer to a question regarding possible recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation at Algiers. It exemplified yet again the wartime danger of the informal press conference. For it is a reasonable assumption that what Mr. Roosevelt was trying to say, but saying very badly, was that with the overwhelming majority of the French people unable to choose their own Government, the Algiers regime could not be recognized as the government of France.

If this is what the President meant it is too bad he didn't weigh his words more carefully. The incident is the latest of a series of examples which should suggest to him the advisability of closing down his press conferences for the duration. For his ill-considered and off-hand remarks have alarmed both De Gaullist and Giraudist French. Moreover, they have offended a great many friendly governments. These could not help but wonder what would happen to them if the President's French yardstick were generally applied. France, certainly, is not the only country the overwhelming majority of whose people are now under enemy rule. There are also Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium, Yugoslavia, Greece, Luxembourg, the Philippines, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Yet their governments-in-exile enjoy full diplomatic recognition by the United States. The Algiers regime, so far as the United States is concerned, is neither a government de jure nor a government de facto. It enjoys neither the status of a sovereign regime, nor a status comparable to that of the 1918 Czechoslovak National Committee and the Polish National Committee, which during the last war the Allies recognized as spokesmen of their respective peoples.

The situation in regard to the French is anomalous, even absurd. We have recognized M. Hoppenot's "authority" in Martinique, but we have not yet recognized the "authority" of the Algiers Committee whose agent he is! Some of our allies have been more forthright. At least seven Allied countries, including five governments-in-exile, have recognized the committee. It is also evident from Anthony Eden's statement in Parliament Wednesday that the British government is about to fall in line if, in effect, it has not already done so. "In practice," said Mr. Eden, "the government are now treating with this committee on all matters of common concern relating to French territory which acknowledges its authority and affecting French forces maintained in British territory. No decision has yet been taken on the precise degree of formal recognition which the government may accord to the committee." Perhaps the British are held back from a more formal recognition by the United States.

It is too bad that our country in this first test of our political strategy is not providing an example to the United Nations. Sometime or other it must join the procession, and that won't be helpful to its prestige, though it will be a repair job.

Robin Moor

So much blood has gone under the bridge since May 21, 1941, that the mind can scarcely recall the affair of the Robin Moor. The Nazis have now reminded us. They have boasted that it was one of their submarines which sank the Robin Moor. At the time they refused to acknowledge any responsibility. Well they might, for the Robin Moor carried no contraband, and was sunk in an area—800 miles off the Brazilian coast—which Germany had never bothered to designate as a war zone; so that any acknowledgment of such piracy by the Nazis might have brought on war earlier. But the explicit denial of responsibility by the Nazis was enough for the isolationist wing of Congress. It still had its blinkers on. No matter how patent the facts that this Nation, even before the Robin Moor affair, had already been thrust into a state of war by Hitler's bid for world domination, the isolationists refused to believe the evidence of their own eyes. Accordingly they sought all manner of explanations for the torpedoing of the Robin Moor, including the theory that the British had done the sinking. This in face of the story of the ship's officers that they were interrogated by uniformed Germans with a thick German accent and given German provisions for their lifeboats! The only reason for harking back to this history is that isolationism is not dead, but sleeping. Isolation got this country into war twice, and there are those who want to give this negation of a policy, this turning of the back on any responsibility for the world we live in, a third chance.

Sign For The Future

There is a story told about General Eisenhower which may be apocryphal but which has the ring of truth and illuminates the nature of his achievement. He was visited in his North African headquarters by Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, one of Prime Minister Churchill's chief advisers. The talk turned to one of the members of General Eisenhower's staff, and Sir Hastings asked, "By the way, is he an Englishman or an American?" The general scratched his head over the query for a moment, then answered: "To tell the truth, I don't remember. All I know about him is that he's doing a fine job."

Perhaps we shall have to wait for historians to evaluate Ike Eisenhower as a military strategist even as a tactician. On the face of things, he appears to be doing very well in Sicily. But his greatness as a leader of men is already established beyond challenge. For what he has accomplished in the Mediterranean theater of this war has not been basically a military miracle so much as a miracle in human relations. He has assumed the command of men from many lands — Americans, Britons, Frenchmen, South Africans, Greeks, Poles, Indians, New Zealanders—and welded them into a unified fighting force. He has given them a sense of community transcending their sense of nationality. He has forgotten the place of origin of the men under him and has made them forget it too. He has ignored the cut of their uniforms and the variety of their insignia. He has imparted reality, at least in the sphere of military operations, to the United Nations ideal.

But the significance of the achievement goes far beyond military operations. It entails something at once more subtle and more fundamental than superb organization of varied services for effective warfare. In the Mediterranean theater there has taken place a genuine pooling of resources, both human and material. Much of the equipment for the campaign came, through lend-lease, from the United States. But much also came, through reciprocal aid, from our Allies. The origin simply hasn't mattered. Distribution has been determined wholly on the basis of strategic need.

It seems worth recording for those who think that lend-lease works in but one direction that when American troops landed in North Africa, the British supplied them with more than 3800 tons of ammunition, with enough artillery for an entire division, with 30,000 tons of engineering equipment, with medical maintenance units for hundreds of thousands of men. Because the radio equipment in American planes proved to be unsuitable for North African conditions, transmission and receiving sets were stripped from all the R. A. F. ships in England and transferred to the U. S. A. A. F. All the materiel of war in the Mediterranean has been used jointly by men joined together in a common purpose.

Here is the most hopeful sign that has come out of this tough and bloody war. It is a sign that men, under great leadership, can rise above the barriers of nationality to act in concert. It is a sign that the identity of interests among them is greater than their differences. Men capable of acting together thus in war are not incapable of acting together in peace. Perhaps they will do so. They are finding that the fruits of mutuality are richer and more rewarding than the thistles of division.

Government Cut

The Bethesda, Md., laundry workers who almost rioted when they opened their pay envelopes and discovered that a sizable deduction had been made for withholding taxes evidently do not read their newspapers very industriously or pay much attention to the radio news commentators. For, if they did, they could not have escaped hearing about the Ruml plan. Whether they would have understood the effect on their pay envelopes of adoption of the plan is of course open to doubt, but they would at least have been less inclined to suspect that their employer was defrauding them.

The harried laundry head finally secured the help of a Department of Labor conciliator and a representative of the United States Employment Service, who explained the procedure to the workers. His plight is a reminder that our elaborate facilities for dissemination of news fails to reach a large percentage of those for whom it is intended. Or if it reaches them it fails to register. That is owing in part to an overestimate of the intelligence of the people, and it is partly the result of the growing complexity of our social and economic institutions that make it almost impossible to present news in an easily digestible form.

Whatever the reasons may be for the generally uninformed state of public opinion, it is imperative that workers be told in simple words and few that they are paying taxes on earnings to their Government and that their employers are serving as collecting agencies, at considerable cost and trouble to themselves.

Robert M. Lovett

When Congress, in its wisdom, decided to discharge Robert Morss Lovett from Government service, it did not go about the mission halfheartedly. First it abolished the office which he held, Secretary of the Virgin Islands Government. Then it passed the objectionable Kerr amendment providing that no part of any appropriation should be used to pay his salary. Apparently Dr. Lovett is not especially popular on Capitol Hill.

That Congress was within its rights in abolishing Dr. Lovett's office is beyond question. But to say that he may not hold any other position of trust or honor in the United States Government is a very different matter. This would be to deny him, in the absence of any criminal charges against him and without judicial trial, an opportunity open to any law-abiding American citizen. This is action, as we have argued repeatedly and as the President stated on Tuesday, which runs directly counter to the constitutional prohibition against bills of attainder.

It is, moreover, a plain infringement on the province of executive authority. The Supreme Court has held that "Article II [of the Constitution] grants to the President the executive power of the Government, i. e., the general administrative control of those executing the laws, including the power of appointment and removal of executive officers—a conclusion confirmed by his obligation to take care that the laws be faithfully executed . . ."

Popularity among our legislators is not an essential qualification for appointment to the executive branch of the Government. If it were, the Government would be wholly dominated by its legislative branch, instead of being divided, in accordance with the constitutional system of checks and balances, into three equal parts. The President is entirely free, therefore, to appoint Dr. Lovett to any vacancy in the Government for which his qualifications fit him. The Post believes that the President should do this, and do it promptly, in order to make possible a court test of the Kerr amendment's constitutionality in Dr. Lovett's case.

Robert Morss Lovett is one of this country's distinguished scholars and educators. In and out of the Government he has rendered valuable services to his fellow citizens—sometimes by challenging widely accepted and conventional ideas. He deserves better of his countrymen than that, in the midst of a war for freedom, he should be denied the opportunity to serve a cause and a country to which his whole past life has been devoted.

Hats And Headlines

The Chetnik hat has now entered the fashion picture, following the Victorian toque, the Chinese coolie model, the Russian diadem, and the Mexican toreador. Before these, we had the South American sombrero, the Dutch cap, the North African visor, and a furtive attempt to introduce the Australian ranger style. Milliners have been hard pressed to keep up with the war headlines. But now it looks as if Sally Victor, who designed what is called the "Chetnik drape," might possibly have gotten ahead of them. All good fashion designers are said to be clairvoyant, to possess the unconscious feel of tomorrow and to create for its happenings, needs and tastes. Could it be possible that the dashing Chetnik turban hung so jauntily on the American woman's head is as good a clew as to where the next big news in Europe is likely to pop as is a learned commentator's prognostication?

It is also not without significance that fashion experts herald the new guerilla hat silhouette as a strong influence in fall millinery, rate it even above Miss Victor's Russian "da-da" bonnet. At least it seems certain that this country will have a constant visual reminder (for a few weeks at least) of one of its most heroic allies, General Mihailovich's indomitable warriors who are fighting on the outlaw front in Europe. To these rugged, daring guerillas in the mountain fastnesses of Yugoslavia it might indeed seem incongruous that their headgear should be flaunted at cocktail parties and luncheons by chic, bejeweled American women. Those of their women who are fighting and enduring privations beside them might find it even more incongruous. But they probably would understand it as a sartorial tribute to their gallantry. They also might be shrewd enough to see in it an omen of their speedy deliverance. For if there is one field in which an American woman plays her cards on the future it is fashion. Her hats above everything else must be a half hour ahead of the times. If she takes to the Chetnik drape with avidity, Hitler might well look to his Balkan defenses.

THE STALLION

The polished and proud-necked one, stamping and neighing,
startles the moon-eyed cow.
The man's mind slips from his plow to love and girls Maying.

The red mare answers her lord and he glitters with power.
His hoofs cut deep in the sod.
There is storm in the great sire's blood and the colts bunch and cower.

Apple trees let down their bloom on the king going under.
He has stain-of-the-sun on his thighs and a star between his bold eyes and his own kind of thunder.

Coal Dispute

By Mark Sullivan

Explosions Likely

THE CONTROVERSY between the Administration and Mr. John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers is about to pass into a new stage, practically certain to be accompanied by new explosions. To understand, let us detach from the long and tangled story the points now pertinent.

The War Labor Board directed Mr. Lewis to sign a contract with the coal operators. As put by Chairman William H. Davis of the board in the decision he handed down: "We have directed the parties to execute new contracts . . ."

Mr. Lewis said he wouldn't. He said the contract stipulated by the War Labor Board was unsatisfactory—he called it an "infamous yellow dog" contract. He said further that in the absence of a contract the miners would not work—"no contract, no work."

Mr. Lewis added, however, that in the absence of a contract with the mine owners, the union was willing to work for the Government. So the miners went back to work, under a stipulation by Mr. Lewis that they would work provided the mines were run by the Government. (The mines were already in charge of the Government, having been taken over during a previous phase of the controversy.)

THE WAR Labor Board felt Mr. Lewis was flouting its authority, which he was, plainly and flagrantly. So the board appealed to the President—asked Mr. Roosevelt to make Mr. Lewis "comply fully" with the board's direction.

In this appealing to the President, the board was doing what it had often done before—though with an important difference as will presently appear. Time after time employers—this distinction is important—had protested against signing a contract stipulated by the Labor Board. On such occasions, the board had appealed to the President to "compel compliance." The President had said to the employer, as in a case of Montgomery Ward for example, that "as Commander in Chief in time of war . . . I direct Montgomery Ward to comply without further delay." Upon such a command from the President, employers usually complied. In cases where an employer did not comply, the President took over the plant, put it in charge of the Army or Navy.

But the coal case was a horse of a different color. By a more apt figure of speech, the shoe was on the other foot. Here it was not an employer who refused to comply, but the head of a labor union. When a union refuses to comply, what does a President do? Theoretically he should take over the union—which is a going concern, with many employes, with money in its treasury and dues coming in constantly, not fundamentally different from some of the businesses Mr. Roosevelt had taken over in the past.

BUT TO take over a labor union would be the last thing the President would wish to do, even from the point of view of politics. It is the last thing any President ought to do—because taking over labor unions has been a basic practice of totalitarian government in Europe. The President was on a spot. (Incidentally, much Washington comment says it was a mistake for the Labor Board to put the President in such a position.) Mr. Roosevelt was irritated. At a press conference, in answer to a query, Mr. Roosevelt said with some heat that he could not compel Mr. Lewis to sign, that he could not write Mr. Lewis a nice note on pink paper, that he could not compel anybody to go through the manual performance of writing his name on a contract.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, has found a way out—or one has been suggested to him. He has turned to something he does not like, the recently passed Connally-Smith bill regulating labor unions, which he vetoed but which Congress passed over his veto. This act provides that under certain conditions a business that has been taken over by the Government shall be restored to its owners. Apparently the present plan is to say these conditions have been fulfilled, or somehow to bring about fulfillment of them—and then turn the coal mines back to the owners.

This, it is expected, will put Mr. Lewis on the hot spot which the President vacates. Mr. Lewis will have two choices—both of which he hates. Either he and his union will mine coal without a contract—which he has said he never will do; or he must sign the contract directed by the War Labor Board—which likewise he has said he never would do. But maybe Mr. Lewis will devise some third course. In any event, more explosions are likely—the coal case is far from settled.

Air Cover

By Paul Schubert

Key To Sicily

FOR THE enemy, the job of holding Sicily became the job of getting planes over Sicily—and suddenly we realize all over again that Italy's weakness in air power is one of the Axis' great vulnerabilities.

Sicily is in Italy's front yard. If Italy can mass planes anywhere, it ought to be over Sicily. Both Britain and the United States, in invading Sicily, had to bring air cover from overseas, assemble it in North Africa, plane by plane, set up airdromes from which to operate it—then extend it north across the Sicilian Narrows. All this has been a vast undertaking. We have worked at it for months.

The Italian job was by comparison much easier. Sicily is virtually a part of the Italian Peninsula, separated from the Italian "boot" by such a short water hop that the airman hardly thinks of Sicily as a separate island.

BUT ITALY'S air power proved quite ineffectual in the defense of Sicily—as ineffectual as Italian sea power. The job of providing Sicily with defensive air cover fell to the German Luftwaffe.

Where is the German Luftwaffe?

Unfortunately for the Axis, the Luftwaffe is scattered all over Europe—in France, in Germany, on the Russian Front, in the Balkans. The Luftwaffe, on the defensive, is overworked, spread thin, taxed to the limit.

Over Sicily the Luftwaffe proved a poor second, as it has in all the Mediterranean fighting for the past six months.

No matter how valiantly Axis troops fought on the ground, or how many Axis troops were present on Sicily, it was doubtful from the beginning whether they could make up the Axis deficiency in air power.

Throughout the war, ground battles have gone, as a general rule, to the side with the best air cover. This generalization is not an arbitrary rule—air cover didn't win Stalingrad for the Germans, nor did it play a dominant role in the Russian winter offensive. But when it comes to "combined" operations across water, air cover does become a virtual "must" for success. The world first became aware of this at the time of the German invasion of Norway in 1940. Up to that time, conventional sea power had been the dominant factor in a case of this kind, and Germany's weakness in sea power as compared to Britain, was so great that it led to the famous assumption that in invading Norway, Germany had "missed the bus." But strong air cover made Germany's small invasion fleet a more effective force, there at Norway, than all of Britain's vaunted naval strength, operated as the latter was with totally inadequate air support.

LATER ON, at Dunkirk, we saw the situation reversed. The retreat from Dunkirk was a "combined" operation. The evacuation was made possible by the strength of Britain's air cover. Had it not been for this factor, all the ships that Britain could float would probably not have been enough to prevent a debacle.

Since those days the importance of air cover as a factor in "combined" operations has been proven dozens of times. The Japanese offensives into Malaya, the East Indian Islands and Burma in the early months of 1942 were made possible by establishing air superiority in the combat theaters, and moving naval forces forward under that cover. If Britain and ourselves had the defense of the Far East to organize all over again, it is probable that neither of us would move our main fleets any nearer the Far East than they were on December 7, 1941—but we should certainly have great concentrations of air power at places like the Philippines, Singapore, etc. It is notable that once we built up our air power, out in the Far Pacific, to the point where we had local superiority at Guadalcanal, Papua and Darwin, Japanese expansion stopped—more, using outpost naval forces, we began to push the Japanese back.

For the enemy, Tunisia was a "combined" operation which failed for lack of air cover.

And for us, Pantelleria was won under air cover. Had the enemy had air superiority over Pantelleria, Italy might well have held that island—might, indeed, be operating the Italian fleet effectively today, under the shelter of that air cover.

The most striking feature of the Mediterranean air power equation remains the fact that we have built up air superiority despite the fact that we are operating so far from home. Italy, fighting to hold Italian soil, is hopelessly outclassed in this vitally important department. Germany, on the spot as air defender of the Axis, is badly overtaxed. Our resources in aviation manufacture, aviation fuel, and aircraft operation, make themselves felt in this distant overseas operation—as they will one day make themselves felt over Japan.

French Situation

It seems extraordinary and very unlikely that the British government should feel obliged to express its views on General de Gaulle and the French situation through Mr. Ernest K. Lindley. I submit that Mr. Churchill has always been able to speak for himself, and rather more ably than this self-appointed substitute.

Many Americans are thoroughly dissatisfied with the Administration's treatment of the French situation, which they consider neither realistic nor sound. The State Department's mistaken desire to retain in office in the new France the men who are responsible for France's fall, will have little weight with the French people, or with Americans who will guard the old friendship between the United States and France as an important link in world peace.

The French people have shown that they regard De Gaulle as their leader, whether it is agreeable to the State Department or not. We ignore the will of France at the peril of a rift among allied nations and of a questioning of our good faith by the whole world.

ADELE K. WORTHINGTON.

Lansier

Many newsmen still falter when they refer to the unique method of attack which combines land-sea-and-air forces. Churchill's reference to amphibious warfare is not precise because the "indispensable" in modern warfare, air power, is not included. Because such movements of war will occur again and again, a single term would be quite useful.

Why not abbreviate land-sea-air into a phonetic: Lansier? Then we could say, "The panzer system was limited to continental war, but the lansier system is global."

Store Clerks

In reply to Mrs. Wildeman's letter re shopping hours for Government clerks: Why is it that only one class of worker is considered? Why will a Government worker's vitality be any lower after a day's work than a store clerk's? Let her stand on her feet for 8 hours, 6 days a week while some shopper haggles over price, complains about quality and then she'll know what low vitality really is. CLERK.

Shock To Patriots

Of late there seems to have been quite a stir raised against this rather fanatical sect called Jehovah's Witnesses. It seems most people are shocked by the Supreme Court's decision that these people or for that matter Americans in general are not required to salute the Stars and Stripes.

What a shock that is to the patriots who consider patriotism to consist of cheering the flag in a movie house or in a burlesque when it is draped over a buxom chorus girl.

Personally I cheer the Supreme Court's decision. True patriotism—a deep love and reverence for one's nation and institutions—is not measured by one's celerity in cheering and shouting, and no one can force patriotism on another by requiring that he salute the flag.

De Gaulle

Our Government is again snubbing General de Gaulle by inviting General Giraud to come to Washington to confer with the President and high military authorities, but not inviting him. For those of us who want the war to be fought on anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi lines, this is a very foolish slap in the face to a very good friend, for De Gaulle represents the united underground democratic parties in France. He has steadily insisted that the men who, as rulers of Dakar and Morocco, ordered their troops to fire on us or on our British allies should be eliminated from high office, while Giraud refused to demand the resignation of these men, but protected them in their position as long as he could against De Gaulle's insistence that they be ousted.

I have read with interest your splendid editorial of June 29, entitled "Forgotten Austria."

Comrade Hague

The Daily Worker, American Communist paper, has come out for Frank Hague, New Jersey political boss.—News item.)

I
From the steppes of Jersey City,
From the far off Ural heights,
Ivan Hague, the old-time Cossack,
Takes his stand for human rights;
See him on his Russian pony,
Leather boots and sheepskin hat;
Ivan of the rugged Jerseys,
(Asking sternly "Who threw that?")

II
Comrade Frank, the Volga boatman,
Hear him join the Russian chant:
If you do your ears are whoppers;
I have tried to, and I can't;)
Tovarisch, of Hudson County,
Standing in the Russian snows;
See him in his Jersey droshky
Where the Volgahudson flows.

III
Toast him in hot Jersey vodka!
Do your wildest Russian dance!
He may wear a smock of Moscow
(But he keeps those Jersey pants!)
Hague, the peerless Asiatic,
Standing by the Azov Sea,
Sobbing from his Petrojersey,
"Them guys can't do this to me!"

IV
Flash the tidings to the Kremlin—
Ivan Hague is communized;
Moscow, Fourteenth Street or Jersey—
Which one is the most surprised;
Russian borsch and Jersey "weenies,"
Vodka in Hoboken beer . . .
Let us all sit down together
'Til the fog begins to clear.

V
Edison? He's just a czarist—
He is clearly lacking all
Of those signal civic virtues
Found in Jersey's city hall;
Vladimir (that is our Frankie)—
For a righteous world is he;
Those who fight him are just blocking
Government by purity.

VI
Hague once toss'd us out of Jersey!
Yes, we've not forgotten that;
We're contortionists, dear people,
And we work without a mat;)
"I'm the law!" he bellowed at us;
It was quite a famous roar;
But that cry we're overlooking,
For, remember, war is war!

Racial News

I should like to express the appreciation of the staff and board of directors of the Washington Urban League for the intelligent and sympathetic handling of racial news by your paper for the past few months.

The editorial comments on rumors, the riots and the postponement of the march on Washington constituted statesmanship and enlightened leadership. Even more important to us, however, has been the inclusion of news regarding Negroes for general community consumption. We refer specifically to the article and picture concerning the Ninety-ninth Fighter Squadron.

Our organization is convinced that if Americans could receive more information regarding the activities of minorities and if minorities could be made to feel that the community as a whole appreciates their efforts and contributions some of the tensions might be dispelled.

Austrian Groups

As United States soldiers with Austrian background, we want to congratulate you on your editorial of June 29, advocating closer ties between all Austrian groups to insure the rescue of their homeland both from Nazi domination and, more important still, from Allied oblivion.

It is, of course, a most difficult task to unite political factions, but it is surely feasible, as may be best illustrated by the fact that each of the undersigned has long since abandoned their original differences of political opinion in favor of the new common effort to establish independence from oppression, and liberty and justice for all.

Stray Dogs

I would like to appeal to your readers as a friend and helper of poor and helpless animals to be more patient and a bit kinder to stray dogs, especially in these days. Not every stray dog is a furious beast afflicted with rabies. And very often it is entirely the fault of the unkind human being when he happens to be snapped at or molested by a stray dog.

Draft Agreement

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Mechanism For United Nations

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the draft agreement for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has been generally overlooked.

LINDLEY

Some members of the Senate have raised the question whether the agreement is, in fact, a treaty which would have to be ratified by the Senate. Admittedly, the line between a treaty and an agreement is hard to draw. But the agreement is more interesting and potentially more controversial on an other account. It is the first blueprint for a piece of United Nations machinery. If accepted by most of the United Nations it may become the model for other United Nations organizations.

One of the most difficult problems in converting the United Nations into an operating organization is to reconcile the rights and obligations of the smaller nations with those of the larger nations. To these two factors must be added a third: operating efficiency.

The draft agreement would establish a Council of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. To this each member government would name one representative. This is to be the policy-making body of the Administration. At each session it will choose a member to preside. It will meet at least twice a year.

THE COUNCIL will have, however, a central committee, able to exercise all the Council's powers between meetings of the Council. This standing central committee will consist of the representatives of the "Big Four"—the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union, China and the United States—plus a director general.

The director general, or executive officer, shall be named by the council upon the unanimous vote of the central committee, and may be removed only by the unanimous vote of the central committee.

Thus, in the council, all members sit as sovereign equals. But in the central committee, the greater interests and responsibilities of the "Big Four" are recognized. More than that, the composition of the central committee accords with the inescapable reality that the peace can be organized and maintained securely only if the "Big Four" agree. The smaller nations do not have to agree. As a practical matter, it would be impossible to obtain a unanimous agreement among them on many questions. But very little, if anything, can be accomplished unless Britain, Russia, the United States and China agree.

Once the "Big Four" agree on the choice of a director general and the council approves, this administrator will have a certain freedom to make decisions.

UP TO this point it might appear that the smaller nations would have no voice or part except at the meetings of the council to formulate general policies. However, additional machinery is proposed. There will also be a committee on supplies, representing the member governments most likely to be suppliers of materials for relief and rehabilitation. It may well include some of the smaller nations in the Western Hemisphere or in other regions which the war has not ravaged.

In addition, the council will have a committee on Europe, representing member governments within the European area, a committee on the Far East, and possibly one or more other regional committees. It will also have many technical standing committees to deal with such specific problems as repatriation, finance, transport, nutrition and health.

Still further, when the central committee of the "Big Four" deals with a problem of special interest to one member government, the representative of that government is to be invited to attend.

The draft agreement already has been approved by the governments of the "Big Four." For the last month it has been in the hands of the smaller United Nations and associated nations (those which have broken diplomatic relations with the Axis but not declared war). The Dutch have lodged a protest, and it is quite possible that their protest will be echoed by some of the other smaller nations.

This may not prove to be the best answer to the problem of reconciling the realities of world politics—which require unanimous agreement among the "Big Four"—with the pride, interests and rights of the smaller nations. But it takes account of these problems, as well as of the need for having an executive officer, or director general, with a certain freedom to act. It is an interesting and, in many ways, ingenious proposal.

Troops Fear Postwar Era

By John Steinbeck

Ask Action, Not Talk

London.—This is no war, like other wars, to be won as other wars have been won. We remember the last war. It was a simple, easy thing. When we had destroyed the Kaiser and a little military clique, the evil things was removed and all good things came into flower. It was not so, but the war was fought on that basis by troops who sang and then ran home for the millennium.

It is said that this is not a singing war and that is true. The soldiers fight and work under a load of worry. They know deeply that the destruction of the enemy is not the end of this war. And almost universally you find among the soldiers not a fear of the enemy but a fear of what is going to happen after the war. The collapse of retooled factories, the unemployment of millions due to the increase of automatic machinery, a depression that will make the last one look like a holiday.

They fight under a banner of four unimplemented freedoms—four words, and when any one in authority tries to give these freedoms implements and methods the soldiers hear that man assaulted and dragged down. It doesn't matter whether the methods or the plans are good or bad. Any planning is assorted at home. And the troops feel they are going to come home to one of two things—either a painless anarchy, or a system set up in their absence with the cards stacked against them.

Ask Simple Assurances

Ours is not a naive army. Common people have learned a great deal in the last 25 years, and the old magical words do not fool them any more. They do not believe the golden future made of words. They would like freedom from want. That means the little farm in Connecticut is safe from foreclosure. That means the job left when the soldier joined the Army is there waiting, and not only waiting bue it will continue while the children grow up. That means there will be schools and either savings to take care of illness in the family or medicine available without asvings. Talking to many soldiers, it is the worry that comes out of them that is impressive. Is the country to be taken over by special interests through the medium of special pleaders? Is inflation to be permitted because a few people will grow very rich through it? Are fortunes being made while these men get $50 a month? Will they go home to a country destroyed by greed? If anyone could assure them that these things are not true, or if being true that they will not be permitted, then we would have a singing army. This army can defeat the enemy. There is no doubt about that. They know it and will accomplish it, but they do not want to go home to find a civil war in the making. The memory of the last depression is still fresh in their memories.

They remmeber the foreclosed farms, the slaughtered pigs, to keep the prices up, the plowing under the crops, because in a starving country there was not intelligence enough in the leaders to devise a means of distributing an oversupply of food. They remember that every plan for general good life is dashed to pieces on the wall of necessary profits.

These things cannot be overstated. Any one who can reassure these soldiers that such things will not happen again will put a weapon in their hands of incredible strength. it is said to such reassurance. What do the soldiers hear—that Mr. Jones is calling Mr. Wallace names; that Mr. Jeffers is fighting with Mr. Ickes; czars of this and that are fighting for more power and more jurisdiction.

Congress in Hysteria

Congress, in a kind of hysteria of impunity from public criticism, has removed even the machinery of relief which might take up the impact of a new depression; that black markets are flourishing and that the operators are not little crooks, but the best people. The soldiers hear that the price of living is going up and that the wages are following them. A soldier is not a lone man. He usually has a family dependent to a large extent on the money he can allot, and his pay does not increase with the cost of living.

These are the things that he hears. The papers are full of it, the letters from home are full of it—quarreling, anxiety, greed. And being a soldier he cannot complain. He is forbidden to complain. You cannot have that kind of thing in an army. He is not cynical, but he is worried. He wants to get this war over with, and to get home to find what they have done to his country in his absence. The four freedoms define what he wants but unless some machinery, some foundation, some clear method is shown, he is likely to believe only in that freedom which Anatole France defined—the equal freedom of rich and poor to sleep under bridges. Who can reassure the soldiers that what seems to be happening will not be permitted to happen?

WPB Outlines Self-Regulation Plan for Textile Retailers

The text of the War Production Board statement asking retailers of textiles and textile products to effect a policy of self-regulation to help obviate the necessity for clothing rationing issued yesterday, follows:

Immediate action to implement Chairman Donald M. Nelson's program to avoid rationing of clothing was taken today by Arthur D. Whiteside, director, Office of Civilian Requirements, in a call to the Nation's retailers of textiles and textile products to place into effect a policy of self-regulation issued by the War Production Board. The policy was formulated in a series of conferences between representatives of the wholesale and retail trades and OCR.

Mr. Nelson announced Tuesday a six-point program to obviate the necessity for rationing of clothing and other textile products. The points are: (1) Increased production; (2) orderly and adequate distribution; (3) more "volume" merchandise; (4) allocation of materials to essential needs; (5) increased imports of burlap and (6) proper care by consumers.

Today's action by Mr. Whiteside puts into effect the second point of the over-all program, that of orderly and adequate distribution. Similar policy declarations covering other segments of the textile field will be announced in the near future, Mr. Whiteside said.

Telegrams to Trade

Mr. Whiteside sent telegrams to various trade associations in the retail field as follows:

"May I ask your association's aid in conveying quickly to the retailers of the country the full text of the retail sales and promotion policy declaration of the chairman of the War Production Board? Please explain to them its extreme national importance and our complete confidence that they will fully support this program in both spirit and letter. I am positive that retailers will successfully conserve civilian supplies by this program and render a direct personal contribution to the war effort and eliminate the necessity for stringent regulation. This is the most important and broadest step in individual commercial self-regulation ever attempted in this country."

Text of the declaration of policy by the War Production Board:

The War Production Board has established the fact that there is an adequate supply of textiles to meet essential civilian needs. In order to provide for their proper retail distribution, and to assure the civilian population an even flow of textile products, the chairman of the War Production Board has adopted the following promotion and distribution policies, and requests retailers to conform to the same.

I. Retail promotion policies and practices with respect to textiles and textile products.

"Scarcity" Advertising

(a) The use of fear of scarcities as an appeal in promotion and selling efforts shall be eliminated. This means elimination of such practices as:

1. "Scarce" advertising.
2. "Buy now" advertising.
3. Selling statements, such as "We may not be able to get more."

(b) Reference to quantities in promotion, except in the case of bona fide clearance sales, shall be eliminated. This means such practices as:

1. Mention of small or large quantities as an urge to buying

(c) Promotion featuring "sales" prices shall be limited to bona fide clearance sales of not more than the approximate volume and frequency of the past performance of the particular retailer. This does not mean that retailers should change their customary merchandising policies of reducing prices on certain items periodically. Price comparisons of specific items in advertising shall be bona fide and shall be limited to clearance sales. This provision means the elimination, except in the case of bona fide clearance sales, of such statements and practices as:

1. "Our price is $8.95, formerly (or usually) $10.95."

2. "Our price is $8.95, elsewhere in town, $10.95."

3. Use of "special value" appeals, such as "these values, prices or qualities may never again be equalled," or "these prices are good for a short time only."

4. Use of the word "sale."

The provision does not mean the elimination of comparisons of particular prices with ceiling prices for particular items.

(d) It is suggested that advertising and sale promotion appeals, in all media, including newspapers, magazines, radio, car cards, and all other media, previously used for efforts of the types eliminated, could be diverted to such purposes as the following:

Suggested Substitutes

1. Item advertising of regular merchandise at regular prices (as restricted by (a), (b) and (c) above).
2. Institutional copy.
3. Conservation and care of goods.
4. Repair service departments.
5. National and local war efforts.

(e) Additional attention shall be devoted to training, checking and supervision of sales force by such subjects as the following:

1. Elimination of "scarce" appeal by sales personnel.
2. Elimination of special commissions for multiple sales.
3. Knowledge and promulgation of methods of conservation and care of merchandise sold.

II. Equitable distribution by retailers.

Equitable Distribution

It is declared to be the policy of the War Production Board that textile products be distributed equitably by retailers, that no retailer discriminate in the acceptance or filling of orders as between customers (provided that the extension of credit by a retailer shall be at his discretion), and that no retailer sell to any customer a quantity of merchandise in excess of the reasonable needs of such customer, taking into consideration other customers to be served from the limited quantities.

III. Effective date.

This declaration of policy shall become effective immediately, July 15, 1943. It will exempt only such sales or promotions as already have been scheduled prior to the date of this declaration, provided that they are completed prior to August 1, 1943, and restricted to merchandise in stock or on order prior to the date of this declaration.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

War Contributions

Princeton, N. J., July 15.—When peace comes, there will never be any dispute as to who lost the present war, but interminable arguments are certain to arise over who did the most to win it.

That was the case after the last war, when many countries began wrangling over the question whether it was the British or the French or the Americans who finally forced the Kaiser to the wall.

Already in the present war, laymen are beginning to evaluate and appraise the importance of each country's contribution to the defeat of the Axis. The results, colored by emotion and national pride, illustrate the deep-seated human failing of being unable to appraise one's own effort objectively.

The British, according to a public opinion survey in Britain, think they have thus far done more than the United States has toward bringing eventual victory. Americans, on the other hand, rate our own war contribution ahead of the British. The average American gives substantial praise to Russia, but not as much as the average Briton gives.

No one will ever be able to settle the argument, of course, but lay appraisals of the war effort of various countries may have a definite influence on postwar relations among the powers involved.

The contrast between the British and American views is revealed when one sets side by side the results of surveys by the British Institute of Public Opinion in Britain and by the American Institute here on the question:

"Which of these countries do you think has done the most toward winning the war so far—Russia, China, Britain or the United States?"

VOTE IN BRITAIN

Russia	50%
Britain	42
China	5
United States	3

VOTE IN UNITED STATES

United States	55%
Russia	32
Britain	9

It seems apparent from the results that British voters were thinking primarily in terms of actual fighting to date, whereas Americans were thinking in terms of war production or potential production.

The American survey found that appraisals in this country differ markedly, according to degree of education. Persons who have had college training single out Russia by a large vote as the country which has made the biggest contribution to the war so far, and place the United States a poor second. Going down the education scale through high school and grade school, the number placing the United States at the head of the list increases.

	College	High School Only	Grade School Only
Russia	50%	35%	28%
United States	27	50	62
Britain	18	10	7
China	5	5	3

With British and Americans each lauding their own country's effort ahead of the other, it is interesting to combine the views of the two nations and strike a balance.

UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN COMBINED

Russia	41%
United States	29
Britain	25
China	5

Brown Defends OPA

Prices In Two Wars Compared

The text of a statement issued yesterday by Prentiss M. Brown, OPA administrator, follows:

Naturally you want the hot news first. With respect to the Maxon statement, you are highly intelligent reporters and I can add nothing to your knowledge by a statement of the background and reasons for it. It will add nothing to the war effort abroad nor the peace effort on the home front to discuss the personalities involved. Affirmations or denials will only provoke further discord and I decline to join.

Two serious matters require answer. Has OPA a policy? It has. It is clear and unmistakable. Its policy is to bend every effort to comply with the direction of the Stabilization Act and maintain the general relationship and levels of prices and wages as of September 15, 1942.

In cooperation with the other agencies we are aiming at that goal. There has been a 6 per cent rise since September 15 with a 1 per cent decline the last month. We hope for a further decline when the current figures are released.

The record in this war is so much better than in the first war that I marvel at the demands for the change. In this period of the first war, food cost had risen slightly above 50 per cent; in this one we are slightly below; on all other fronts the record is better. Clothing at this time in the last war had risen 64 per cent, this one 27 per cent; house furnishings in the last war, 59 per cent; this one 23 per cent. Rents have been held. Bread, the staff of life, rose in the forty-fourth month of the first war by 54 per cent; in this one 11 per cent.

What is all the complaints about?

U. S. Not to Manufacture

The other serious charge is that certain people in this office propose that the Government shall take over manufacture and distribution of all commodities. I have never heard any such proposal by any individual and certainly there is absolutely no intention on the part of this office to undertake any such control. Price Administration operates under law. The life of the agency expires on June 30, 1944, and can only be renewed by congressional enactment. There is nothing to this charge.

The Congress has laid down certain conditions for us. They will be fully obeyed in both letter and spirit. Specifically, the employment amendment will prohibit the continuance after August 16 of men without business experience in any position where price policy, ceilings or maximums are formulated. The matter will be submitted to the comptroller and the decision of the comptroller will be obeyed. There will be no grade labeling. Congress forbids it.

The price of corn will remain at present levels. I am informed it is moving to market.

The support price of hogs has been fixed and will continue. There is no present move to place ceilings at the live animal level on beef. We want to give the industry every chance to work out the problem. This type of ceiling is most difficult to work out.

The oil situation is better. Supply by water and rail and pipeline is better. The uncertain factor is the war demand. There are limits on civilian supply below which we cannot go. We have reached, yes, gone below that point in the East. Consistently, day in and out, I have opposed restrictions to the extent that we have them here.

Mr. Byrnes said in his statement yesterday that one of the war agency heads had asked for the conference on oil held yesterday. I am the man. I have always opposed the so-called pleasure driving ban, except and unless absolutely necessary. The "A" card holder should be permitted to use his gas in any way he sees fit. As soon as possible we will lift this restriction. The "B", "C" and "T" cards are given for specific purposes and must be used only for those purposes.

Some Still Fight Election

There is no fight between Mr. Ickes and me or Mr. Davies and me. There is most intense discussion and there is now going on a close examination of the supply and demand picture. I have pointed out that Tunisia is ours and Sicily is falling our way, first because of a magnificent Army, Navy and Air Force, second because of the magnificent support at home, the warworker, the farmers, and the sacrifices of you and me. Germany with a numerous and unquestionably courageous army is losing, because the home front is now disorganized, and broken. Let's keep our unity here.

In 1940 under unprecedented circumstances President Roosevelt was reelected. He is the chosen leader of the people for this war effort until 1945. Many people, mainly his political opponents, are still fighting that election and refuse to accept the verdict. They are also fighting the next one. The next election will be decided by the American people. The last one was. I accept that verdict and that leadership, Senator Norris said this.

"I would like to live long enough to see our brave Army victorious on all the battle fronts in which it is now engaged in the cause of human freedom.

"To bring this about as speedily as possible I pray for a united front on behalf of our people.

"Let us quit quarreling among ourselves and unite unanimously behind our leaders, and I am sure if we do this we will not only win a complete victory but our hearts and souls will be seasoned for an honorable and honest peace that will forever disarm our enemies and eventually bring about a world dominated by honesty and friendship among all peoples on earth."

Let's get together behind our chosen leader.

Ickes Unable to See Bright Spots in Brown's Gas Picture

The oil and gasoline situation in the East is better, Prentiss Brown, head of the Office of Price Administration, told his press conference yesterday, but immediately Secretary of Interior Ickes, as petroleum administrator, declared that no more motor fuel could be supplied to Eastern motorists.

Brown said he had always opposed the pleasure-driving ban, "except and unless absolutely necessary," feeling that "A" card holders should be permitted to use their small rations as they see fit. The pleasure-driving ban in the Northeastern States will be lifted as soon as possible, he said, but holders of "B, "C" and "T" books must continue to use their rations for specific purposes.

Ickes, however, said that no easing of driving restrictions is foreseeable.

"We can't make the mistake we did a little while back of allowing gasoline to be used for other than essential purposes," Ickes told reporters. But he added that apportionment of gasoline for civilians is up to OPA.

"We provide all the gasoline we safely can, and its up to the OPA to apportion and say what use can be made of it."

Meanwhile Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado urged President Roosevelt to appoint Rubber Director William M. Jeffers as "czar" of liquid and solid fuels in a letter made public yesterday.

Johnson wrote the President Wednesday that "distribution is the real problem involved and Mr. Jeffers is a practical railroad transportation expert. The handling of these fuels is a great, big transportation job—and little else."

Nats Win, 4-3; May Obtain Newsom

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

We'd say they made Buck Newsom the fall guy in the Brooklyn mess. There have been occasions during his stormy big league career when a ball club could give Bobo the heave-ho on a number of counts, but this one looks like an unfair rap. Injured innocence may be a new and incongruous role for Newsom, but that's what it adds up to.

POVICH

From what we learn from our faithful Brooklyn operatives, Newsom didn't deserve to be traded to the Browns. He was the victim of the system. Manager Leo Durocher, not Newsom, got into trouble with the Brooklyn players and the baseball press. General Manager Branch Rickey had to take a stand. Firing Durocher, at least right away, would tacitly recognize the players' right to revolt. That would be a dangerous precedent, fraught with trouble for every big league club owner. So Rickey got rid of Newsom.

Newsom, until he was sold down the river to the Browns, emerged from his squabble with Durocher with flying colors. He made Durocher retract the statement that he was suspended for second-guessing Catcher Bragan. When Durocher declared that the suspension was dealt Newsom for "insubordination," specifically his failure to pitch inside to Vince Di Maggio, Newsom was upheld by Di Maggio, himself, who said he hit a pitch that was "10 inches inside."

Bobo had the best pitching record on the Brooklyn team when the Dodgers got rid of him. He had won nine and lost only four. But every National League club waived on him. So did the Athletics, Red Sox and Cleveland, who weren't interested in Bobo at the $7500 waiver price. Owner Bill Cox of the Phillies was blunt about it. "We don't want a player who won't help our club's morale," he said.

In outraged innocence, Newsom is now saying he won't report to the Browns. "I got the dirtiest deal any ball player ever got," he said. "Ive been the goat all the way through this thing, and I guess I'll have to quit, and will quit before reporting to St. Louis. I don't want to play in St. Louis, I won't play in St. Louis and I'm not going to report.'

That's the melarkey, of course, Newsom will report to the Browns and he will play for the Browns. He won't quit baseball. Retracting such statements never bothers Bobo. He's trying now, no doubt, to bludgeon the Browns into giving him some kind of an honorarium for the honor of signing him.

Ten years ago, Newsom threatened to quit baseball just as loudly. The Chicago Cubs sold him to Los Angeles of the Coast League. "You can have California,' he told the Cubs, "I'm quitting.' That same season saw him pitching for Los Angeles and winning 31 games to become the Coast League's leading pitcher.

Among baseball men, Luke Sewell of the Browns, is now rated as a brave manager because of his willingness to sign Newsom. Five American League managers and one in the National League know Newsom as a Headache Boy, but Sewell is willing to take a chance in reward for the games Newsom could win for him. The Browns would move up automatically as a pennant threat if Newsom pitched his best.

When Newsom says he doesn't like St. Louis, he speaks as a man of experience. This would make his third term with the Browns. He came up with them in 1934, and was back with them in 1938. He always wanted to get out of St. Louis. Buck always wanted to play with the Yankees. That was his idea of being a big shot. If it couldn't be the Yankees, then Brooklyn would satisfy him. That was pretty close to Broadway and Leon and Eddie's and Toots Shor's.

The fact is that Newsom almost ended up with the Nats again. If the Browns hadn't claimed him, Washington would have. The Browns got him when the sixth, seventh and eighth-place clubs in the American League, who had first call on Newsom after the National League waived on him, passed Bobo up. Connie Mack doesn't care for such as Newsom, the Red Sox, in seventh place, are managed by Joe Cronin, who was constantly at war with Bobo when Newsom was at Boston; and at Cleveland Manager Lou Boudreau doesn't want to sit on a powder-keg.

But if the Browns had passed Newsom up, and the fourth-place White Sox didn't want him, then Newsom would have been a sure-shot to come back to Washington again. Clark Griffith always liked the big fellow. Newsom appealed to Showman Griffith who admittedly paid more than Buck was worth when he bought him from Detroit in the spring of 1942 and gave him a bigger salary, $20,000, than any other Washington pitcher in history except Walter Johnson.

Joe Medwick Faces Trade Or Release

Outfielder Remains Home as Dodgers Leave for Boston; Explanation Today

By the Associated Press

New York, July 15.—Joe Medwick, veteran outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers and in his prime one of the greatest slugging stars of the National League, was left at home tonight as the Dodgers departed for Boston. It was assumed he would either be traded or released.

Just before the ball club boarded a train, Manager Leo Durocher announced to writers that Medwick had been given permission to remain in New York and said an explanation would be forthcoming tomorrow.

Since Brooklyn now is one over the 25 player limit as the result of acquiring Fritz Ostermueller and Archie McKain from the St. Louis Browns yesterday for Bobo Newsom, the writers quickly reasoned that Medwick was the player who would be lopped off the roster.

Medwick, who never has batted less than .300 in his 12 previous seasons in the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn, currently has an average of .272 and it is no secret that Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, has made repeated efforts to trade him.

Under baseball rules the Dodgers do not have to come within the player limit until their two new players report to the club. Thus Rickey has at least until tomorrow and perhaps slightly longer to negotiate a deal that will reduce his squad by one player.

Johnson's 2-Run Homer, Vernon's Triple Decide; Griff Contacted by Bobo

Carrasquel Wins Tenth in Relief Role; 16,565 See Nats Retake Second Place; Newsom Anxious to Return for Third Time

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The big Indian, meaning Bob Johnson, carried the Nats to the point where Mickey Vernon's eighth-inning triple beat the Red Sox last night at Griffith Stadium, 4 to 3.

Johnson doubled in the fourth inning to drive in a run that cut Boston's lead to 3-1, and when the Nats still needed two more runs in the sixth, he bopped his fifth home run of the season into the left field stands with a man on base.

The Nats moved back into second place as the Tigers lost to Chicago.

The 16,565 customers watched matters rock along at 3-3 until two were out in the eighth when Red Sox Pitcher Yank Terry made the fatal lapse of walking Stan Spence. Whereupon Vernon didn't dally. He rattled a three-bagger high off the right field wall, and that was the ball game.

All Extra Basers

The Nats were power-minded last night. They didn't trifle with singles Of their five hits off Terry, three were doubles by Johnson, Sullivan and Spence, one was Vernon's three-bagger and another was Johnson's homer.

Like the Nats, the Red Sox were also held to five hits, and the fellow who emerged the pitching hero was Alex Carrasquel. Senor Carrasquel inherited a 3-0 deficit from Early Wynn in the third inning and shut the Red Sox out for the rest of the game. It was a fair sort of relief pitching job.

All three of the Red Sox runs were technically unearned, spawning from three walks issued by Wynn in the second inning which were aggravated by Alex Kampouris' muff at third base.

After Lupien coaxed a walk from Wynn to start the second, and was sacrificed along, Jake Early apparently caught him in an attempt to steal third, but Kampouris muffed the throw. Lupien eventually scored on Doerr's infield out. A bit later Wynn walked Conroy and then walked Pitcher Terry, and then Culbertson tripled them both home with a blow to left center.

Scores on Johnson's Double

The Nats set to work on the Sox's 3-0 in the fourth when Sullivan led off with a double to left. He languished on base until two were out when Johnson got him home with a double to right.

Sullivan was on base in the sixth as a result of Tabor's wild throw to first and after Spence and Vernon popped up, Johnson worked the count to three balls and no strikes. Terry moved a fast called strike across the plate, but Johnson was laying for the next one. It wasn't cricket, perhaps, but big Bob smashed the 3-and-1 pitch on a line to the left field bleachers to tie the score.

The Nats backed Carrasquel up in fine style in the fourth when the Sox failed to score on Fox's single and Doerr's double off the left field wall, with none out . . . Johnson hustled a throw back to the infield and Priddy's relay to Jake Early caught Fox on a close play at the plate . . . Carrasquel did all right in the sixth when Lupien tripled off the right field wall with one out . . . He made Fox pop up and fanned Doerr . . . In the eighth after he walked two men with one out, Carrasquel got Fox on a pop to Early . . . Joe Cronin pinch hit in the ninth with two out and none on, and Kampouris stole a hit from him with a fancy stop and throw. George Case wasn't in the line-up because of a sore left arm, the effect of being hit by Mort Cooper's pitch in the All-Star game . . . Tonight, Milo Candini goes to the mound against Left-hander Oscar Judd of the Sox.

Concession Men 'Strike' at Stadium

The fans at Griffith Stadium last night nearly went without their hot dogs and pop as concession men threatened to strike. A delegation formed and asked Calvin Griffith, chief concessionaire and nephew of Clark Griffith, for a 20 per cent commission instead of the 10 per cent now paid. The concession men claimed it was the lowest commission rate in either league.

The hawkers asked for a flat 20 per cent commission or a bonus system. Griffith, who told The Post he "did not like their attitude in forming a mass meeting" ordered the strikers off the ball park's property. They went peaceably. Many returned to work while about half refused and went their way.

Griffith last night said he would attempt to iron out the trouble "in a dignified and quiet" manner if approached properly by a delegation of the hawkers.

Must Get Waivers

Such a deal would necessitate a new request for waivers on Newsom by the Browns, inasmuch as the deadline on player trades fell on June 15, except by the waiver route.

It is expected that the Nats would be greatly interested in Newsom, inasmuch as they lack depth in their pitching staff. Newsom has told friends that "I could pitch Washington to the pennant and Clark Griffith knows it."

Newsom has always been a favorite with Griffith, who likes the big pitcher's sense of showmanship and his work on the mound. He bought Newsom from the Browns in 1936, and in 1942 he acquired him again from Detroit.

Showed No Interest

All of the clubs below Washington in the pennant race would have first claim on Newsom if the Browns asked waivers, but Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland showed no interest in him when Brooklyn sold him to the Browns. The White Sox have not yet had a chance to claim Newsom and could be the stumbling block in any deal that might send him to the Nats.

Wills Floors Sparmate in Balto. Drill

By a Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, July 15.—A Frankie Wills in the finest condition of his career for his 10-round nontitle bout Tuesday at Griffith Stadium with "Tiger Bob" Montgomery, lightweight champion, today was promised by the veteran Heinie Blaustein, one of the boxing game's outstanding handlers and trainer of fighters, who is readying the District welterweight champion at the Century Athletic Club here for his big test.

Blaustein put Wills through seven stiff rounds at top speed, and after watching him floor "Speedy" Wallace, Negro welterweight from Detroit, twice, predicted his charge would whip the lightweight champ. Following the workout, Wills weighed 144½, which he expects to weigh at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the official weigh-ins. Wills has posted $500 forfeit to make 145.

Montgomery, at his Green Oak Inn (Md.), training camp, yesterday started strenous drills, boxing thre rounds with Aaron Perry and two with Billy Morris, local Negro lightweights. Notified he had been signed for a bout August 17 in Philadelphia with Fritzie Zivic, Montgomery speeded up his workouts and announced he was taking no chances on Wills turning in an upset, which might effect the status of his date with Zivic, a fight which will probably draw $50,000.

Phils Wallop Giants, 9-1; Barrett Stars

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 15.—With Dick (Kewpie) Barrett pitching brilliant seven-hit ball, the Phillies walloped the New York Giants, 9 to 1, before a paid attendance of 7143 at Shibe Park tonight. The Phillies bunched their nine hits effectively for an equal number of runs.

The Phillies started things rolling by driving out Reub Fischer, the Giants' started, with four hits and four runs in the first inning.

In the second inning, Triplett drove home Danny Murtaugh, who had walked, with his second straight hit. Buster Maynard's homer in the third stanza was the Giants' first and last score of the evening.

The Phillies picked up two more in the fourth, and they greeted Harry Feldman, the third New York pitcher, with two more in the fifth.

Cubs Pound Riddle, Beat Reds, 8 to 0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 15.—The Chicago Cubs broke up Elmer Riddle's winning ways tonight as they pounded the Cincinnati Reds for an 8-to-0 victory behind Hiram Bithorn's hot pitching. Ken Nicholson hit a homer with two on for the Cubs in the eighth.

The Cubs chased Riddle in a five-run third inning. Len Merullo and Bithorn opened with singles, and Stan Hack filled the bags with another. Ed Stanky knocked Merullo and Bathorn in with a fourth single and Phil Cavarretta followed with a triple to the rightfield corner. That was all for Riddle.

The defeat was Riddle's fifth against 11 wins and the tenth shutout suffered by the Reds this year.

'Pity' the Criminal

Baltimore—The criminal just can't win with the Office of Price Administration—if he uses "A" ration gasoline to commit a crime it's pleasure driving, and if a "B" or "C" book is involved he's violating occupational driving regulations. Maryland courts are asked to report crimes involving the use of cars so the OPA can "summarily revoke" offenders' gasoline rations.

'Never Put Off—'

Hagerstown, Md.—Mrs. Earl Recher, Chewsville, Md., had canned part of the garden peas and had estimated that there remained on the vines enough to fill 50 more cans. She had planned to pick them the next day. That evening a flock of blackbirds alighted in the garden and neatly picked almost every pea from the pods.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agencies Begin to Feel Congress Budget Cuts

The effect of budget cuts made by Congress are now being felt in Federal agencies. Already some are laying off employes. But others are hiring them fast. Congress ordered these agencies abolished: National Youth Administration, Board of Investigation and Research, Bituminous Coal Division, Bituminous Coal Consumer's Counsel, and the National Resources Planning Board. These agencies must reduce their staffs: Soil Conservation Service, Federal Crop Insurance, Farm Security, Office of War Information, National Labor Relations Board, Office of Civilian Defense, Civil Service Commission, and the War Production Board information division.

KLUTTZ

And in reducing staffs a common mistake is made in trying to keep favorite employes. Employes who have permanent status have been given notices in several agencies, while employes with temporary status in the same office are retained. This is directly contrary to Civil Service rules and permanent employes who have been given notice should appeal immediately to the commission. The commission has laid down a clear-cut formula to be used in the reduction of force. The policy requires that employes shall be cut off in this order: (1) temporaries; (2) employes who haven't the trial period which is usually a year; (3) war service appointees, and (4) permanent employes. A person who has served three consecutive years—no matter how his appointment may read—is considered to be a permanent employe for purposes of a reduction in force.

The commission, however, is planning a change in its reduction procedure to prepare itself for the postwar period when employes will be lopped off by the thousands. Efficiency ratings are now controlling in reduction in force. In other words, if two permanent employes must be cut off it'll be the two with the poorest efficiency ratings. Seniority isn't now a factor. The only exception is veterans, who keep their jobs if they have good or better efficiency ratings. The commission is now working up a new procedure which will recognize seniority. It'll be a combination of efficiency ratings and seniority but greater weight will be given the latter.

Seen in a Navy Department office: NO TALKEE, NO TELLEE, NO CATCHEE HELLEE. This seems to be the motto of some Government public information offices . . . Draft deferment status of Capitol Hill employes is up in the air. A joint congressional committee with Senator Thomas of Oklahoma as chairman, was set up to pass on deferments of Capitol employes, but it appears to be suspended with the Congress . . . New officers of Interior's American Federation of Government Employes' lodge: John Lundquist, president; C. G. Birch and Katherine Koetz, vice presidents; Eugenia E. Billings, secretary-treasurer, and Ralph W. Berry, sergeant at arms. Department delegates are Leland Acuff, George Warren and Birch.

Late yesterday Treasury had released practically all the delayed pay checks and if you weren't paid yesterday you're certain to be today. Only a few scattered offices whose money is appropriated in some complicated way won't get paid today. Office of Price Administration was able to pay its money-hungry employes yesterday as a result of a bang-up job by its fiscal division. An official stayed with the payroll as it made the rounds of General Accounting and Treasury and the cash and checks were released in time to get everyone paid yesterday. Most every other agency paid off yesterday or the day before.

Imagine this: The District Commissioners sought draft deferments for a number of their key employes. The President's committee refused several of the applications. The Commissioners not only appealed every case, but they wrote a letter to the Costello Committee complaining of the way they had been treated. The Costello Committee, if the Commissioners don't know it, has been raising hell because of the number of deferred Government employes. That's like asking the devil to get you in heaven. . . . Max Abel and John R. Bradley have been retired from the Bureau of Mines. . . . Membership in the Brotherhood of Sensible Men is booming. The hot weather is bringing out a few bigwigs and a lot of little wigs in open-necked shirts and short sleeves.

Government Girl Guards of Honor To Join Council

Government Girl Guards of Honor will join the Federal Employes Recreation Council, it was announced yesterday by Agnes Richardy, Veterans' Administration employe, who is secretary of the organization which was formed permanently following the campaign in April to purchase two warplanes for the Army and Navy.

Plans were outlined at the Wednesday night meeting to increase the present membership, Miss Richardy said.

Miss Steadman, Treasury Department employe, was named to assist Miss Richardy in the membership drive.

More Fire Risk Rules Planned

Officials Admit Lax Enforcement Of Existing Regulations

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

While District department heads and enforcement agencies were admitting yesterday that enforcement of regulations to prevent repetition of fatal rooming house fires was lax, the Commissioners prepared to adopt today still more rules to add to the unenforced patchwork of "emergency regulations."

All of which leaves the thousands of war workers living in the 10,000 District rooming houses in about the same fix they were before public and congressional pressure led the Commissioners to order non-procurable fire escapes on all rooming houses and later to promise instead they would insist on scrupulous observance of all safety measures.

The additions to the emergency regulations to be considered at today's board meeting include—along with various provisions for theater and other public assembly fire prevention—qualifications of the Health Department's maximum occupancy restrictions, whose strict enforcement the Commissioners declared would be ample substitute for the fire escapes which the War Production Board decided were nonessential.

Little Evidence

Yet a check yesterday of the Health Department, the Corporation Counsel's office and the Building Inspector showed little evidence of insistence on complying with the original ruling.

Building Inspector Robert Davis said that this was not in the province of his department and that enforcement of the inspector's own regulation was difficult because of reluctance of the corporation counsel to prosecute its cases, and more because of the apparent sympathy of the courts with the housing shortage in Washington as against the rigid observance of building regulations.

Of rooming houses inspected, some 22 per cent were found in violation of safety rules on the second inspection, and he was able to bring few of these to court, Davis said.

The corporation counsel's office retored that applications for informations from the building inspector came in at about the rate of one every six weeks, and that these were always carried through.

It had been agreed as a matter of policy, however, that the most expeditious way of cracking down on operators of unsafe rooming houses would be to prosecute for operation without license, the license generally being refused because of noncompliance with the Health Department regulation for 50 square feet of occupancy for each person in a sleeping room.

Corporation Counsel Edward Thomas said that in the months since the series of boarding house fires caused a demand for action, not more than six applications for information had been filed from the Licensing Department, and that none had come in within the past two months. One application citing the noncompliance with the space regulation had been filed by Acting Sanitary Inspector Robert Wilson—and this, Thomas said, should instead have been filed by the Licensing Department.

It was pointed out that a complication in the first hazard control by invoking this Health Department ruling to prevent overcrowding was caused by a bill of health given the Navy Department some weeks ago by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who said that the new dormitory for WAVES at Eighth eenth and G Streets Northwest fully complied with this occupancy regulation, even though it had been disapproved by one of his inspectors. Ruhland said that his inspector and the girls complaining were in the wrong, because they did not take into consideration closets and toilets when computing the square feet of occupancy, as Navy inspectors did.

Furnishes Precedent

Although inspectors of nonmilitary sleeping accommodations have been instructed to count only the actual space in the sleeping room proper, it has been possible for proprietors, if they wished, to cite Ruhland's decision as a precedent for them to count in such footage—thus circumventing the Commissioners' intention of preventing overcrowding by use of this Health Department regulation.

Defective cook stoves, improper use of electrical extensions, of flexible connections to gas hotplates, of insulation behind electric heaters and the like—the common law makes many of these the tenants' responsibility, and there's no way to check up on them, said Corporation Counsel Vernon West. The only way to move against them is through the landlord, and if he is to tell the offending tenant to get rid of them or get out, he is confronted with the Rent Administration, which would block if not prevent altogether eviction on such grounds.

Ballad Singers to Be Feature Of Post Concerts Over Weekend

The American Ballad Singers, who topped a rich vein of folk tunes on a visit to Washington last year, will repeat several of these "discoveries" in the fifth and sixth of The Post series of Starlight concerts tomorrow and Sunday nights at Meridian Hill Park.

An ingenious group with extensive interest in finding native folk ballads, the sextet attracted 5000 persons to their two concerts last year in the same park. After their performances, listeners lined up backstage to extend congratulations, and enrich the singers' repertory with ballads.

Fully half a dozen rare folksongs from remote sections of Virginia came from these conversations, according to Elie Siegmeister, director of the group. Especially interesting are several folk songs from Irish Creek in Rockbridge County, Va., including one fire and brimstone ballad of "The Drunkard and the Gambler."

The song begins this way:

The drunkard came and the gambler
And the man who sold them their drinks
And the one who sold him his license
Together in hell they will sink.

And oh, what a weeping and wailing
When the lost ones are told of their fate
They cry for their rocks and their mountains
They cry—but their cries are too late.

Other discoveries include "The Shelf Behind the Door," a denunciation of idol worship as it was practiced generations ago in the mountains, and a lusty ballad of "Jonah."

The American Ballad Singers are constantly seeking new folk tunes. They go to the docks to talk to fishermen and sea. n. They wander through streets of cities in which they sing, listening to the cries of vendors. In their Saturday night concert here, they will give street cries from Brooklyn and New Orleans.

Tickets may be obtained at the Cappel Concert Bureau in Ballards, 1340 G Street Northwest. They may also be bought at the park box office at 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65.

400 Get Vacation Permits; Many Expected Extra Gas

Post Staff Writer

More than 400 vacation travel authorizations were issued yesterday to District automobile owners by local boards whose officials were hot, weary and harrassed from trying to explain the intricacies of OPA's latest order.

Chief misunderstanding patient volunteer and paid clerks had to clear away was a widespread idea that extra gasoline would be given for vacation trips. Providing they comply with several other requirements, would-be vacation travelers may go on one trip, but only if they have sufficient gasoline in tank or on coupons. Those motorists who have used their A coupons for essential driving are "out of luck." Their next A coupons come due July 22, are scheduled to last four months, and are worth but 24 gallons.

Radius Too Limited

Chief complaint heard by the boards was from District residents seeking to go further than 24 gallons maximum will allow. Those who sought to go home for a vacation further than the maximum will allow are banned from authorizations even though they meet other requirements.

Since Washington is a city filled with people from all parts of the country, local board officials said, complaints of the discriminatory nature of OPA's regulation filled the air.

Most generous issuer of permits yesterday was Local Board 21 at Oyster School, Twenty-ninth and Calvert Streets Northwest. Board 21 gave 89 residents of that area permission to motor on their vacation.

Action by Other Boards

Other boards acted as follows: Board 10, 18 authorizations; Board 11, 15; Board 12, 11; Board 31, 76; Board 60, 42; Board 42, 2; Board 20, 73; Board 32, 15; Board 40, 40; Board 41, 1 (50 pending); Board 30, 72; Board 33, 13 (39 pending); Board 50, no report; Board 61, no report.

Travelers on vacation will be required to show that they have a stamped duplicate copy of their application for authorization and a special notation on their A books.

Taken into consideration by the boards is the question of whether there is alternative means of transportation, whether the travelers are carrying much baggage and the physical condition of the applicant.

Ideal Travel Applicant Is Discovered by OPA

Local OPA officials yesterday cited this example as the ideal applicant to use an automobile for vacation travel:

An elderly woman unable to climb train steps who is taking her daughter and four children to a camp three coupons away, which is at least 25 miles from a railroad. Lack of help makes it necessary for her to take also parrot, cat and goldfish. One child is a baby whose impedimenta includes bottle kit, two bags for three-cornered underwear, baby carriage, folding bathtub, hanging crib and blankets. A local board admitted such an applicant met all OPA requirements.

Vice and Liquor Charges Bring Enforcement Parley

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court held a closed conference of representatives of the courts, police and welfare agencies on how the court could cooperate with District authorities in the rehabilitation of habitual drunkards and prostitutes.

Though no policy on the matter was fixed at the session, two committees were formed to investigate and report their findings at a meeting to be held in Judge Barse's chambers on July 29.

Joseph Sanford, probation officer of Municipal Court was appointed to ascertain to what extent the judges can be furnished with past records of offenders on which penalties may be imposed leading toward rehabilitation after conviction.

The second committee will investigate the scope of existing law with reference to possible medical treatment and hospitalization where criminal charges are filed and before they are filed. This committee is empowered to determine whether the court can direct examination and medical treatment.

This committee is composed of Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray, Police Inspector Harvey G. Callahan and Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau.

Judge Barse denied that the meeting was instituted because of reports by church and social leaders recently indicating that Washington leads the Nation in drinking and vice. He said, on the other hand, that many Municipal Court judges had visited the jail a few months ago and had investigated available facilities for rehabilitation. Ten days ago, said Judge Barse, a preliminary meeting of judges was held which led to this meeting.

Gas Permits Suspended in Illegal Sales

Reporter Testifies He Bought Fuel Without Coupons; Two Cases Continued

Two gasoline station operators were found by an OPA hearing commissioner yesterday to have violated regulations after a Post reporter testified that he had been able to buy gasoline without coupons at their stations.

Two other cases were heard but were continued for the introduction of additional evidence. Presiding was Lester C. Dunigan, OPA acting hearing commissioner, and the sessions were held in the Municipal Court Building.

The reporter was Linton Burkett whose expose of the sale of gasoline without coupons in The Post on June 11 was partially responsible for the action brought by OPA against the gas dealers involved.

Sales Suspension

Eugene George, operator of a service station at 1801 West Virginia Avenue Northeast, was found guilty of exchanging gas without receiving valid coupons therefore and was ordered to suspend the sale of gasoline between August 2 and August 11. In this case Burkett testified that on June 10 he purchased five gallons of gasoline from an attendant there. Burkett testified that before the gasoline was delivered he had told the attendant that he had no coupons but that he wanted to get to Philadelphia.

An OPA accountant testified that an inspection of George's establishment revealed a shortage of coupons equivalent to 371 gallons of gasoline, and that many of the coupons appeared new. Some of them, it was said, were invalid by reason of having the wrong license tags inserted on them.

George claimed that he often received blocks of coupons from businessmen who had accounts with him. He said he was paid at the end of the month or whenever bills were paid, which might account for the new coupons and for the discrepancy.

Suspension Suspended

H. B. Dukes, 3011 Nichols Avenue Southeast, received a 10-day suspension order but sentence was suspended in the case. His attorney noted an appeal in the case.

Burkett testified that he appeared at the station in the early afternoon on June 10 and spoke to an attendant who informed him he could have no gasoline at that time but that if he returned later he might obtain it. When he returned at 6:30, Burkett said, he received 10 gallons of gasoline at the ceiling price.

Warren Sanford, part-time attendant at the station, testified that he only gave Burkett the gasoline because he was told Burkett wanted to visit a dying mother, and that the coupons would be returned. Burkett denied these allegations.

Cases against the Homes Oil Co., involving five stations, and against Lad Mills, operator of a station at Wisconsin Avenue and Q Street, were continued. The Mills case is scheduled to be concluded today, and the Homes case has been continued until an additional witness is found.

OPA Attorney Carl Berueffy presented the cases.

City News In Brief

Downtown Washington's activities were interrupted yesterday at 11:30 a. m. when the air-raid siren atop the District Building suddenly went berserk, and let off with a four-minute blast that had hundreds running for cover, and other hundreds looking at their watches and deciding they were a half-hour slow.

Something went wrong while electricians at Fire Alarm Headquarters, Fourth and Douglas Streets Northwest, were working on cables which were connected with the city's various raid sirens.

Burned by Electricity

Wilson Smith, 42, of 2808 Second Street, South Arlington, Va., was painfully burned yesterday when he came in contact with a high-tension wire while working on the Virginia side of the Railroad Bridge.

An electrician, Smith was engaged on an installation job when the accident occurred. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where physicians said his condition was undetermined.

Home Conversion Parley

Members of the Realtors Washington Committee, National Association of Real Estate Boards, conferred yesterday with Philip M. Klutznick, in charge of the war homes conversion program for the National Housing Agency, regarding progress of that work. This was at the close of a two-days' session of the committee at Mayflower Hotel.

Junior Board Portrays Safety Needs; Drive Opens Sunday

The Junior Board of Commerce yesterday launched a drive to "Smash the Seventh Column" at a luncheon at the Statler. Bruce Palmer, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, presents to screen actress Anita Louise a plaque in behalf of Pete Smith for his production, "Seventh Column," a movie short subject calling attention to the need for reducing the high accident rate in the United States. Looking on are Paul V. McNutt, left, WMC director, and Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, second from right, provost marshal general.

The Junior Board of Commerce yesterday ended its first meeting to "Smash the Seventh Column" with a perfect record in averting accidents despite the fact the room was filled with more than 300 men when Anita Louise walked in.

The only character who did more than strain his neck was "Falstaff Pratt," the "indestructible man," who portrays the careless American in Pete Smith's "Seventh Column."

In the specialty motion picture, previewed by members and guests, Pratt falls most every place. He trips over an object on a war plant floor which shouldn't have been left there; slips off a stool which shouldn't be used as a stepladder; and plunges head-first down a pair of rickety wooden steps in an unlighted basement.

These and other common accidents which hamper efficiency on the home front are shown in a humorous way, but call attention to the serious problem of reducing the accident rate in the United States.

Plaque Presented

Miss Louise, a slender blonde who has just completed the new film, "Restless Lady," accepted for her friend, Pete Smith, a plaque presented for production of the film. Bruce Palmer, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, made the presentation.

The meeting, a luncheon in the presidential room of the Statler Hotel, was attended by members of the U. S. Junior Chamber who are sponsoring the antiaccident campaign on a national scale. Winfield Weitzel, president of the Washington Junior Board, was master of ceremonies.

The drive to "Smash the Seventh Column" on the District scene will officially open Sunday with announcements and sermons in many churches.

Monday will be Government Day, when, through the cooperation of the War Department Safety Council, under the direction of Col. Pelham D. Glassford, and the Federal Interdepartmental Safety Council, a program will be broadcast from the Department of Interior Auditorium.

Tuesday is scheduled as business and industry day. Washington workers with outstanding safety records will be guests of honor of the Junior Board at luncheon. Wednesday will be traffic and pedestrian day; Thursday, home safety day, and Friday, children's day.

Approximately 500,000 instructive booklets and posters will be distributed to homes, Government and business establishments in Washington during the week of the drive, Weitzel said.

Miss Louise, here to visit her husband, Capt. E. M. Adler of the Army Pictorial Section, Bureau of Public Relations, was escorted to the luncheon meeting by Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, provost marshal.

Other guests, representing organizations who will participate in the offensive against the seventh column, included:

Robert J. Watt of the American Federation of Labor; Margaret Hickey, chairman, women's advisory committee, War Manpower Commission; Paul V. McNutt, WMC director; Irmgrene Nevins, director, first aid, accident prevention and water safety, American Red Cross; Doug Timmerman, executive vice president of the United States Chamber; Robert Ewing, chairman of the "Smash the Seventh Column" drive; E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co.; Arthur Sundland; Jim Lake of the Automotive Safety Foundation; Rear Admiral Emory Land of the Maritime Commission; William Wileham, District air raid warden; William A. VanDuser, District Traffic Director; Stephen Porter, District fire chief; Clifford Folger of the District Red Cross; Robert Haycock, acting superintendent of schools; Washington I. Cleveland of the American Automobile Association; Otho King of the Keystone Automobile Association; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of civilian defense; Inspector Arthur E. Miller of the Traffic Division of the Metropolitan Police; Rear Admiral Richard McCullough, chairman, Safety Advisory Board, Office of War Information, and Lieut. Helen B. Schleman, executive officer of the SPARS.

Nine Convicted of Violating Ban on Pleasure-Driving

Nine motorists were found guilty of violating the pleasure driving ban in another OPA special panel board hearing last night at Force School, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Among the 16 cases heard were:

J. Raymond Stuart, who last week was fined three A coupons but because he had an appointment with his draft board at the same time he was to appear before the board, had the case continued to last night's session.

Stuart, a warehouse chief for the WPB, admitted having six C coupons loose in his possession but said they were given him by a "friend from Texas."

John Laskey, OPA attorney, asked that the sentence be reimposed. Stuart again was penalized three A coupons which the board considers six weeks' driving suspension.

Samuel Mark Pearson, who said he worked for the FBI, told the board that the eight C coupons which he had loose and which had not been issued him had been "found in an ash can." He was fined three A coupons and suspended for two months B driving.

Sentenced on July 8 to forfeit six weeks of A coupons and six weeks of B coupons, Edward C. Meister, 2215 Minnesota Avenue Southeast had his penalty reduced to four weeks of A coupons and four weeks of B coupons.

Horace C. Young, 3016 Tilden Street Northwest, was assessed a penalty of two A coupons and his B book was revoked. James C. Kelsey, 231 Fifteenth Street Southeast, paid a penalty of one month of A coupons and suspension of C coupons.

Abe Weinfeld, 1279 Brentwood Road Northeast, "because he was honest," got off with the loss of a single A coupon for taking his own and another family on a picnic.

Reese C. Knox, a Negro who works for the FWA, failed to prove that taking a car full of friends to the ball park was not pleasure driving. He forfeited two A coupons.

Julia D. Silkey, 1301 Vermont Avenue Northwest, who twice had been notified to appear before the board and who failed to show up last night, was fined two A coupons.

Charges against Richard R. Brickley, 1028 Florida Avenue Northeast, were withdrawn by the board when Brickley's father told the chairman his son was a soldier and "probably in Sicily just now."

Carl C. Bladen, who said he operates a farm in Takoma Park, testified that he was on his way to Brightwood to get some tomato plants and seed when his car stalled. The case was dismissed.

Meanwhile, OPA announced yesterday a policy of securing almost airtight cases before summons were issued for pleasure driving. Yesterday 89 alleged violators were reported. Of these 69 were reported from Maryland, 5 were reported by park police, and 15 by OPA inspectors. Yesterday the District OPA announced that Board 20 had dismissed 3 cases of a total of 6 reported July 9, had left 2 pending, and had sent 1 back to the District officials because the alleged violator did not come within the jurisdiction of that board.

Of 3 cases reported to Board 50, 2 were dismissed, and Jesse Long of 912 F Street Southwest was fined 2 A coupons, a District OPA official said.

Rent Control Law Upheld By Court

Action Dismissed In 3 Cases Brought From Large Defense Sections of Country

The U. S. Emergency Court of Appeals upheld the constitutionality of the Emergency Price Control Act yesterday in dismissing three cases brought by real estate men in defense areas which challenged the OPA and its rent ceiling regulations.

The decisions were handed down by Judges Albert C. Maris and Calvert Magruder. Fred M. Vinson, now head of the Office of Economic Stabilization heard the cases but had resigned as chief judge.

The cases were brought on appeal from OPA decisions by Stanley W. Taylor, owner of rental property in San Francisco; the Lakemore Co., operator of an apartment house in Cleveland, and Charles W. Wilson and Emma Bennett, owners of an apartment building in Chicago. All attacked various phases of the OPA rent control as unconstitutional.

Stating "it is no longer open to doubt rent control is necessary to the effective prosecution of the war should rent increases be allowed to go on unhindered, the inflationary spiral resulting might endanger the Nation's economic structure.

The court held under the war powers of Congress, the Emergency Price Control Act is constitutional since the Constitution has given Congress the broadest of powers during such emergencies as the one the Nation is now in. Quoting a decision by Chief Justice Hughes, the court states, "It is a power to wage war successfully, and thus it permits the harnessing of the entire energies of the people in a supreme cooperative effort to preserve the Nation."

"We accordingly conclude the power to fix maximum rents for housing accommodations is within the war power conferred upon the Congress by the Constitution," the court decreed.

Commenting on the contention by Taylor that the rent control provisions of the price control legislation involve an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority by Congress to the OPA administrator, the court stated:

"It is obvious in a desperate emergency of war such as at present confronts the country, Congress could not itself appraise all the factors necessary to be considered in fixing maximum rentals in each of the hundreds of diverse defense-rental areas which would be generally fair and reasonable in their local setting and which would carry out the congressional purpose. In carefully stating its purpose and the standards which the administrator is to follow in effectuating that purpose in the areas involved, Congress has done all that the Congress requires of it."

Foy Sisters Win $50 Bond For Playyard

Patricia, almost 2, and Nancy, almost 4, in whose name their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Foy, jr., entered the home play yard contest, yesterday won a $50 war bond when judges named them first place winners. Their play yard, at 2220 S Street Northeast, was picked from a field of 230 entries which judges have personally inspected since July 1.

The award will be made in ceremonies next Friday at 11:30 a. m. over radio station WMAL, when Commissioner Guy Mason will make presentations to them and nine others who placed in the contest.

Others who will receive awards are, in order of their placement: Doris Cohen, 117 Oglethorpe Street Northwest, outdoor gym set; Emmett Bailey, 6146 Thirtieth Street Norhtwest, $25 war bond; Frederic Kendall, 6021 Third Street Northwest, $15 in play equipment or war stamps; Billy Middleton, 3194 Westover Drive, wading pool with shower; Mrs. Helen Davis, 4714 Sheriff Road Northeast, $10 in play equipment or war stamps; Mrs. John C. Payne, 1010 Park Road Northwest, umbrella play tent, and Arthur Swann, jr., 2412 Shannon Place Southeast, Mrs. William Taylor, 626 I Street Northeast, and Bobby Eakle, 2520 Burns Street Southeast, each of whom will receive $5 in play equipment or war stamps.

The Foy yard facilities covering an area of about 300 square feet, are an example of fatherly ingenuity. Mr. Foy made everything but the swing standard. The yard contains a sandpile, badminton set, doll house, tree house, picnic table and benches, giant stride (made with ropes and an automobile hub), sunning mat made out of glider cushions, horseshoe and quoit courts, swings and Victory Garden where the Foy daughters, including 10-year-old Beverly, help pick vegetables. It is a real neighborhood playground. "All of the children in the three deadend streets on this side of Bladensburg Road come here to play."

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

Day-Long Vacations

Have you indulged in a day of out-and-out pleasure lately? It's not such an impractical idea, nowadays, what with vacation time cut to a minimum and bosses screaming when you mention taking your legal six days off all at once. If you're keeping expenses down to bedrock and buying War Bonds like mad, you would do well to take your summer relaxation in occasional inexpensive snatches—right here in Washington.

If a change of scene is what you look for in a vacation, try some leisurely sight-seeing. Trotting about from public building to public building on gummy asphalt is not much of a joy in July, so here are some cool, calm and beautiful spots to see. First of all, have you explored, the Lee Mansion? This is, according to lots of so-called experts, as wonderful an example of colonial housing as Mount Vernon—and there's no doubt that its history is as rich in famous names. The mansion is just over the bridge in Arlington (you can see it, perched on the hill, from Lincoln Memorial). Most of the buses which are routed over Memorial Bridge go within a nice strolling distance of the house (transportation cost—10 cents). The fee charged visitors is also 10 cents—and includes a guide who, like all of his colleagues, appears to have gathered up all manner of little anecdotes about the mansion and its inhabitants. He will be glad to whisper these knowingly to any group of less than 50 and, since there are few visitors on weekdays, you should rate some extra special stories. The view of Washington from the front porch (if such splendor can be called a front porch) is worth the trip, and the various small buildings and grounds are fun to browse around.

If you've never seen Mount Vernon itself, you may find Lee Mansion a worthy substitute—but if you must see George's old homestead you can still get there. Of course, tourists are not provided with special transportation these days, and it's not so easy as it once was to get to the big house on the Potomac. There's still a bus, though, which leaves Alexandria every hour during the afternoon and will condescend to drop you off at the gate.

If you're not quite energetic enough to be house-looking, why not visit one or two of the more "browsy" spots hidden away right here in town? Bet you've never seen what's to be seen at the Lincoln Museum, for instance. This is at 511 Tenth Street (just a hop below F) and you can see the Old Ford Theater as well as the house in which Lincoln died after the shooting. The museum has some very quaint and seldom-seen relics and it costs all of 11 cents to see the works.

Maybe you've heard people describing some of the gruesome but fascinating sights they've seen at the Army Medical Museum. This is one of the most exciting museums you can find anywhere (strictly as much fun as the Smithsonian—in a specialized sort of way). It's at Seventh and Independence Avenue Southwest. A morning spent in the Medical Museum is a must for a gal with curiosity—or even a vague interest in the facts of life. If you happen to come upon anything too realistic for your delicate nerves, you can always close your eyes (and ten to one you'll peek, at that!)

Art Galleries

Something unostentatious and great fun in the way of art galleries is the Freer Gallery at Twelfth and Independence Avenue Southwest. The special attraction here is an exhibition of Oriental works of art—tiny Chinese carvings, tapestries and jewelry that will make your mouth water. Even if you don't know a Ming vase from a Ch'in (and who does?) you'll find yourself in another and more beautiful world among these gems of an older culture.

If you have any literary aspirations or interest, you'll have a great time in the Folger Shakespeare Library, 201 East Capitol. This is another specialized spot in which you can find just enough fascinating things to keep you occupied happily for a few hours.

On the gayer side, there's the Pan American Union Building, Seventeenth between Constitution and C Northwest, where you can see Latin-American exhibits (and very purty, too) any day between 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. It's smart as well as fun to look over this display of Americans, just to keep up on what our good neighbors and Allies are doing these days. And besides, the Pan American Union is a most beauteous place to relax on these 90 degree afternoons.

Have you seen a good aquarium lately? There's a fine one sort of hidden away under the main lobby of the Department of Commerce Building. Those who know suggest that you arrive on the hour (any time between 9 and 4 weekdays) so that an expert will be on hand to tell you what's what in the aquatic world.

If your idea of a vacation, one-day style, is pure relaxation, what about devoting a day to quiet bliss? Why not spend a day on yourself—begin with a long, lazy bath, a defuzzing of legs, a pedicure and manicure, a cold cream treatment on your nubby elbows, an eyebrow arch, an hour or so trying out new hairdos as shown in a fashion magazine purchased for the purpose. If you can manage to make a beauty of yourself in less than 8 hours, then do a bit of that reading you've been postponing—especially satisfying is a book you can read at one sitting, or poetry you can dip into indulgently.

Can't think of anything you could see or do at a vacation spot that can't be done right here in Washington. Can you?

Beat the Heat

Now that hot weather is here, it might be a good idea to size up the way you behave when the mercury mounts.

Are you one of those who grumble incessantly about the heat? Do you take a sadist's satisfaction in talking about how hot it was yesterday and how much worse it is today? Or do you make an honest effort to forget the heat?

And how about your appearance? Do you go around looking like a wilted leaf of lettuce—your hair in strings, your makeup the worse for wear, your frock limp and crumpled?

What happens to your temper when it is 95 in the shade? Are you one of those who grow peevish and cross so that any conversation with you is a hazard? Do you let your voice rise high and your tone grow sharp, just because you are uncomfortable? Or do you try to keep your voice even and your answers civil?

The weather is just as warm for your family and friends as it is for you. And some of them have more to try them in other ways than you do. You can do a lot to make the heat more bearable for them and to make yourself more popular by giving some thought to the way you look and act.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Riding a Bus From Alexandria to Washington Last Sunday, Soldier Lost His Heart to Charming Girl He Doesn't Know; Implores Help in Finding Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This letter is about a girl,—a girl and a 20-minute conversation that I can't shake out of my mind. What I am going to write may sound a bit silly; but you are the only person I know who might be able to help me. It was on a bus going from Belvoir to Washington, Sunday afternoon, July 11, about 3 or 3:30 o'clock. The girl got on somewhere between Belvoir and Alexandria. I guess her smile to the bus driver was what made me notice her particularly—aside from the fact that she was very nice looking.

When the passengers changed buses at Alexandria, there happened to be a vacant seat next to her, and I took it. We started talking idly, as people do on buses; but it wasn't very long until it dawned on me that this was more than an idle chat,—at least so far as I was concerned. However (and here comes something I shall never stop regretting), we parted at Twelfth and Pennsylvania Avenue,—and I didn't even think to ask her name. I was in that much of a fog. How I wish I had that moment to live over again!

It is incredible to me that I should feel so strongly about a girl on such slight acquaintance. Nevertheless, I know that I do. To me, she was a girl you meet once in a lifetime. That's a pretty "corny" expression; but it describes my feelings exactly. And I let her slip away without having the faintest notion who she is. I do know a few things about her, though. If you could print something about our encounter, there is a chance that she, or some friend of hers, might see it. I may be kidding myself, but I have a hunch that she feels a little bit as I do.

Has Identifying Data Based on Brief Chat

Here's what I know about her: She has lived in Washington for five years, but is a native of North Carolina. She doesn't work for the Government (that in itself makes her pretty unusual), as she is a governess for a 3-year-old child. She lives in the Southeast part of the city and is going to spend a vacation with friends in New York City beginning, I believe, next weekend. She has three sisters and three brothers; and also a brother-in-law who is, or was, in North Africa. She wore a green dress on Sunday and no hat. Her hair is brown. She has the most beautiful smile I have ever seen. How I wish I could put that description on the police teletype and have her found! Since I can't, would you please help me?

Would you ask her, in your column, if she would send you her name and address,—that is, if she wants to? That way, she can decide whether or not she will accept your introduction of me. I don't want to presume on our slight conversation, if she would rather I didn't. PLEASE DON'T USE MY NAME IN THE PAPER,—as I am afraid my commanding officer would think I had taken leave of my senses. Since he is now passing on my application for Officer Candidate School, I wouldn't want that to happen. I realize my request is sort of irregular; but if you knew how sincerely I mean it, I am sure you would want to help me. I am afraid I am not going to be a very efficient soldier as long as this state of suspense continues. Thank you for anything you may be able to do. Yours very truly, F. B. V.

Cultivating Strangers Always Risky Business

DEAR F. B. V.: It is against the rule and contrary to the best judgment of this column to lend encouragement to introductions of the take-a-chance type which you propose. The reason should be obvious. Strangers, and particularly youngsters, in a large city should (as a vital matter of physical and moral defense) exercise the utmost discretion in expanding their lists of acquaintances. Any approach to friendship, starting from scratch in such circumstances, should be surrounded and safeguarded by a bona fide exchange of gilt-edged guaranteez certifying the background, "respectability" and character dependability of the principals involved.

The formality (or technicality) of "introduction" has attained its honorable status in polite and orderly society, and presumably conveys a special privilege upon the persons introduced to proceed without dubiety to cultivate friendship, if they so desire,—for the reason that the responsibility-fraught gesture of sponsoring an introduction presupposes a favorable knowledge, on the part of the sponsor, of the two individuals who are being introduced.

However, I feel justified in making a tentative exception to the established rule of this department, in dealing with your appeal. The spontaneously fine tone of your letter breathes a spirit of wholesomeness. As an impulsive expression of a mood, a viewpoint and an aspiration, it is one of the most pleasing documents-from-youth I have ever received. It implies intelligence, taste, education, humor, poise and courage. If you are as nice in person as you are well-bred in correspondence, you doubtless can muster, with almost no effort, a stack of credentials and first-hand testimonials of your "sterling worth" sufficient to honestly convince the Girl-in-Green (and her social watch-dogs) that you would be a completely safe bet as a friend.

Girl Is Reminded To Stand on Dignity

So, if the young lady should happen to read your appeal and should care to make known her name to you (in confidence through this office), I shall pass along the information. With, however, a clear reminder to her, which I now give to you, that IF a friendship is to be developed on a sound basis from this (as you say) "sort of irregular" beginning you must punctiliously provide and she must properly exact, a dossier of information about your "social history" that will stand the close scrutiny and win the judicious approval of her parents or their representatives in this community. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Five o'Clock Faces

By Margaret George

YOU have a date at 6 o'clock. It's nearly 5:30 already. The boss suddenly gives you some last-minute work that has to be out of the way before you leave (why couldn't that so-and-so have told you sooner!*!) It's hot as blazes, the electric fan is out of whack, and you know you look about as fresh as a two-day-old gardenia . . .

What to do? Dreaming of a postwar world with cold showers installed in every office, of a beauty salon with rows of boldly labeled tonics and skin toner-uppers won't get you far . . . if wishes were beggars, horses would ride, etc. Neither will a hasty application of make-up over the old tired job beneath.

AS A matter of fact, piling layer after layer of powder on your face throughout the day is very hard on your skin—particularly in the summer, when the pores are expanded by the heat and ready to blossom into blackheads on the slightest provocation. Summer's A-1 rule is to insure cleanliness of the skin before applying fresh make-up.

Okay, you say, but you've still got only ten minutes to make that date, and you certainly can't carry jars of cold cream and lotions around with you, pluck them out at intervals and start refreshing.

OF COURSE you can't. And there's no need to do so when cosmetics houses have already solved the problem for you. You can get a jar of little tissues, each one saturated with a cleansing and refreshing lotion for around $1. For about a penny a day for a hundred days you can keep your face fresh and glowing no matter what the temperature.

The jar comes packaged with an extra little purse-size container that'll hold enough for several days . . . and tide you over many an emergency. The fine fragrance of this special preparation is enough in itself to bring your spirits up out of the 5 o'clock slump.

IT ONLY takes 30 seconds (as long as you insist on timing it) to rub one of these soft, grime-absorbent tissues across your face. That gives you exactly 9½ minutes to brush your hair, to dab on some cologne (keep a small bottle in your drawer, wonderful antidote for July and August weather), to put on a brand-new make-up.

You'll meet your date on the hour, unhurried, looking like 9 o'clock instead of 6. If you're not careful, you may find yourself waiting, not him.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

To a Newly-Elected Club President

Enjoy your honeymoon while you may,
And treasure its cooings against the day,
When your most ardent supporters will whisper around,
That they fear your action was very "unsound"
In making some appointment or some removal
Without first getting their full approval.

On Being Dumb

She is so slow of wit she never thinks,
Of how to make the neat and barbed retort;
When "friends" or enemies make clever cutting slurs,
Too late she wakens to their will to thwart.

Yet hesitation and confusion pay her well,
They do not fray the edges of her grace,
They leave no tinge of acid in her voice,
No shadow of a snarl upon her face.

The Silver Lining

When the final balance sheet is made out, even this war may have a few small items on the credit side. For instance:

It has done away, for a time at least, with the nostalgia of sentimentally minded men for the South Sea Islands. Wives will no longer have to worry for fear their breadwinners some fine day, tiring of it all, may suddenly abandon home, job and children and set sail for the South Pacific to spend the rest of their days as beach combers attended by bevies of native uninhibited beauties. (Too many husbands of tomorrow will already have been there—and what is more, seen the beauties.)

It has quelled, let us pray forever, the myth of the amorous Arab sheik and spared husbands' further jealousy over their wives' day dreaming in that direction. (Too many soldiers, to say nothing of WAACS are seeing the sheiks at close range.)

It has eliminated (haven't you noticed?) the feminine monologue on diet. What has become of the old-fashioned bridge luncheon addict who had just lost 15 pounds on a banana and milk or a cider and artichoke diet, and who was determined to recite the details? . . . Why she is busy relating how she managed to get all the potatoes she could eat during the famine and how she makes chocolate cream pie on her sugar rations.

It has done away with the gay dog of a husband who was always having to work late at the office and wouldn't be home for dinner. Now after standing in line half an hour at noon to get a sandwich with no butter and a shaving of boloney and a half cup of vaguely sweetened and flavored coffee, he heads for home, come 5 o'clock like an old horse that has been kept away from its own stable overnight. (Home cooked food these days, if nothing more than a macaroni cutlet, can compete with almost any type of rival.)

It has transformed the wafted odors of apartment house cooking into fragrances outrivaling exotic perfumes. Once when we smelled liver and onions frying as we walked along our apartment house hallways we were filled with rage that we had neighbors so crude. Now we rush to the source of the aroma and press our noses against the keyhole.

On the Scarcity of Onions

The dowager who in her youth,
Considered it most uncouth,
An onion to eat,
When there were people to meet,
Now is worried sick,
Over the scene politic,
Which she says keeps her away
From her onion a day.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Those office workers in the Detroit war plant who raised a rumpus over the rule they had to wear slacks had a point. I don't know what their official objection was. But I haven't any doubt they were smart enough to realize that few women look their best in slacks.

In general, women look better in skirts—they don't fit as soon. It takes special exercise to keep those big hip muscles toned and firm enough for slacks and you're not apt to get it when you spend most of your working day at a typewriter or desk.

Of course, you may be excessively overweight. If so, the main thing is to get rid of the unwanted pounds. But right along with the calorie clipping you'll have to take some exercise. Otherwise, you will finish with a flabby musculature and you still won't be cut out for slacks.

Streamlining the hips is a much easier job than many of you seem to think. All you have to do is get a good program and stick to it. If you haven't exercised for a long time you will have to go through a conditioning stage before you can see any improvement. But once you get in form you will be able to trim down at least one inch every two weeks.

In the hot weather the idea is accuracy, not action. Avoid all the huff-puff exercises. You can streamline with an easy but specific set like this:

Stand in your bare feet and face the wall at the side of a doorway so you can hook one arm around the frame. Get up close, with toes, chest and chin touching the wall, and hold on. Now keep both legs stiff and your body absolutely still, and raise right leg in a back-swing from the hip. Lower your foot to the floor and repeat 20 times. Rest, and repeat with the other leg. If you do this exercise correctly, all the action is concentrated in the large, fleshy muscle on the back of each hip. Relax before going on to the next exercise.

To get at a bulge on the outer hipline, resume that position for a side-kick. Keep your body rigid, with toes of one foot, chest and chin against wall, and move other leg from hip in a slow, sideward swing. Lower foot to floor and repeat 10 times. Rest and perform with other leg.

Rolling is one of the easiest exercises and at the same time one of the most effective. Get down on the floor for this. Sit down and lean back with the forearms on the floor at the sides and start rolling, away over on the side of one hip, back across the buttocks, and over on the other side. To begin with, have legs straight down, heels on floor. Keep legs together throughout your rolling. Then flex knees with heels on buttocks, and roll. Between times rest a minute. And don't keep at it until you are exhausted. In spite of the weather, your exercise should rest you.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Homemakers' hearts must have been gladdened when they went to market the last few days. Why? Because in many markets there was a goodly supply of veal. This meat can be made into many delicious dishes. Veal loaf, breaded veal slices, collops of veal in wine, veal stew, veal cutlets, veal paprika and veal birds are some of the dishes possible with this variety of meat at hand.

Veal requires longer cooking than beef. It is always served well done. It may be kept juicy by rubbing a generous coating of fat into its surface. This also gives it a fine brown color.

Cook veal uncovered at a low even temperature, 300 degrees. Do not sear veal roast at any time. It may be dredged with flour. Several strips of salt pork or bacon may be placed on the roast or in the pan and the roast, if dry, may be basted with the drippings. Roast veal 25 to 30 minutes per pound. A shoulder roast may require a few minutes longer per pound.

Cuts for Roasting: Kidney roast or rib, leg, loin, breast, shoulder, cushion, shoulder and rolled roast.

Cuts for Braising or Roasting: Chuck, round bone, rolled shoulder, shoulder, blade bone shoulder and rump roast.

Cuts for Stews: Shoulder, breast, knuckles, shanks, flank and kidneys.

Veal cutlets can be deliciously tender and flavorsome. No oven is required to prepare them. Here is a recipe for cooking them:

Wipe with a damp cloth veal cutlets which have been cut ½ inch thick. They may be rubbed with garlic if desired. Dip them in seasoned bread or cracker crumbs or corn flakes. Next dip them into a beaten egg which has been diluted with 2 tablespoons water, then dip again into the crumbs. Heat in a skillet butter or drippings and brown the cutlets over a quick flame, then cook them covered over a very low flame until they are tender. About one-half hour will be required.

Veal paprika is an appealing dish. This is also a dish that practically cooks itself. The hardest part is getting the meat. Here is a recipe for making it:

VEAL PAPRIKA

Cut into 2-inch squares, 2-pound veal steak that has been cut 1 inch thick. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Peel and cut in two, 1 clove of garlic. Saute it for 3 minutes in 2 to 4 tablespoons fat. And then add meat and saute it until it is lightly browned. Add 1½ cups boiling vegetable stock. Cover the saucepan and simmer the meat for 1 hour or until it is tender. Remove the garlic. Add ¾ cup sweet or sour cream and 1 teaspoon paprika. Heat the cream but do not let it boil. Serve the meat at once with potato dumplings. Recipe for potato dumplings was given in this column recently.

Since it is peach time why not make a delicious dessert using this fruit in combination with sherry wine. You can make it in a single large mold garnished with sugared peach slices or serve it in individual sherbet glasses. Here is a recipe for making sherry peach jelly.

SHERRY PEACH JELLY

Soften 2 tablespoons gelatin in ½ cup cold water. Stir softened gelatin into 1 cup boiling water to which ½ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt have been added. Cool. Add ¾ cup orange juice, ¼ cup lemon juice and ¾ cup California sherry wine. Pour a little of the gelatin mixture into a 1-quart mold. Chill until thick. Arrange a layer peaches, sliced from 3 fresh peaches, in partly congealed gelatin and chill until nearly firm. Pour on remainder of gelatin mixture. Chill until firm. Just before serving, turn molded gelatin onto platter. Garnish with remainder of peach slices, sugared. Serves 6.

Blueberries, too, whether fresh of quick-frozen can be made into delicious desserts or used in quick breads such as blueberry muffins. Try making blueberry shortcakes.

BLUEBERRY SHORTCAKES

Sift 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and ¾ teaspoon salt together. Cut or rub in 4 to 6 tablespoons shortening. Add 2-3 to ¾ cup milk to make soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently. Roll out to ½-inch thickness. Cut with a 3-inch floured biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Yield: About 14 biscuits.

Jellied Consomme
Panned Veal Chops

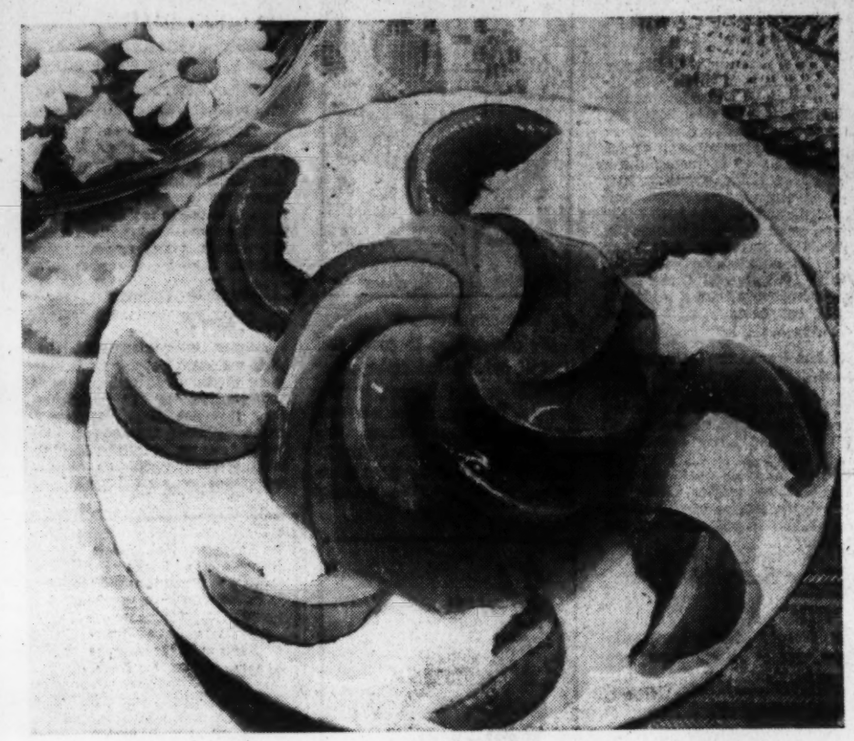
Blueberry Shortcake
Beverage



Fresh fruits should be included in daily menus. No better way to use luscious peaches than in making Sherry Peach Jelly as pictured above. This gelatin dessert will strike a happy note on a scorching hot day. Persons who are watching their weight will like this dessert because of the fine flavor and also because it is not calorie-laden. Blueberries now in season make many an appealing dessert. Individual blueberry shortcakes as pictured at upper right, make a grand dessert, too. The shortcake can be served with cream in lieu of whipped cream

Varied Personalities Characterize Board

Delegates Represent Cross-Section Of Peoples in Latin America

This is the second in a series of stories about the Inter-American Defense Board.

By Patricia Grady

For sheer military personality and background, the 35 delegates that sit around a polished table in the Federal Reserve Building twice a month to carry on the business of the Inter-American Defense Board are second to none.

Tall, short, suave, rumpled, reserved, vociferous and on through a large percentage of the dictionary's adjectives, the delegates present a good cross-section of the peoples that go to make up the 20 Latin-American countries and the United States. Reading their varied biographies is an interesting substitute for reading the military and naval history of this hemisphere in the last three decades. Put them all together, you have a formidable crew of military minds to guard the security of the Americas.

Pages could be written about each of the delegates—all of them compelling reading—but space, is at a premium these war days. So here are vignettes of a few of the men who represent their countries on the Inter-American Defense Board.

MAJ. GEN. ARTURO ESPINOSA MUJICA: "He can make an 80-year-old crone feel like a femme fatale," observes one of his friends about this brilliant, warm-spirited delegate from Chile. He and his stunning blond wife will be leaving the Capital soon, for General Espinosa has recently been appointed as Chief of Staff of the Chilean army. At one time his country's military attache in Washington (1923 to 1926) and later attache in Japan and China, this popular general with the outgiving personality is a real cosmopolite. He came to the Capital the early part of last year as chief of the Chilean Military Mission here.

LIEUT. GEN. STANLEY D. EMBICK: This publicity-shy United States officer has been chairman of the board since its organization. Tall, spare and white-haired, Pennsylvania-born General Embick served as chief of staff of the American section of the Supreme War Council in World War I, for which he was awarded a Distinguished Service Medal. Before assuming command of the Fourth Corps Area in October, 1938, he was a deputy chief of staff. He and his quiet, gray-haired wife have been familiar sights in Latin American social circles since the general took over his present assignment.

REAR ADMIRAL ENRIQUE A. LABARTHE: Peru's stocky, reserved Naval Attache has been at his Washington post since 1939, with his attractive, chic wife. Their five children have been in and out of Washington during his tour here, although their pretty, dark-eyed daughter, Teresa, has made this her headquarters. She has an eight-hour-a-day job as her father's secretary and admits "he's a wonderful boss." The four boys are scattered about. Enrique and Pedro are both agricultural engineers; Hernando is a mining engineer and Javier is a cadet at the naval academy. A linguist, the admiral speaks French, English and Portuguese, as well as his native Spanish.

COL. JUAN JONES-PARRA: Small, dapper and gaiety itself is this Venezuelan delegate whose honors and career history fill five single-spaced typed pages. He and his pretty, alert wife have three children, Juan, Berta and Helvia. A lawyer who holds a Ph. D. in political science, Colonel Jones-Parra has had an unusual and varied military career. He has donned professorial robes a number of times on a plentitude of subjects and was a member of the commission charged with drawing up the by-laws for the social security law of his country. In addition to his other activities, he is the author of seven scholarly books on education, miltary affairs and geography.

COL. OSCAR MOSCOSO: Bolivia's delegate and his statuesque blue-eyed, brown-haired wife are accurately described as a "handsome couple." Good looking with blue eyes and dark curly hair, Colonel Moscoso is a cavalry officer, and looks it. At scattered times in his career he has commanded various army divisions and corps as well as being Chief of Operations of the General Staff. He is famed as the man who fired the first shot in the Chaco war against Paraguay. Before coming to Washington as Military Attache of his embassy in 1940, he served as Minister of Defense in Bolivia.

CAPT. ALBERTO D. BRUNET: This Argentine naval and air attache has an air of old-world gallantry about him. Very tall and fair-complected, Captain Brunet and his friendly, vivacious wife rank high in the Capital's list of successful party-givers. When he arrived in Washington in 1941—his fifth trip to the States—he was accompanied by his wife and two sons, Alberto and Manuel. In 1938 he took over the top naval post of Chief of Staff of the Fleet.

COL. FELIX CASTELLANOS: Tall and ascetic-looking, Guatemala's bachelor Military Attache has devoted his life to public works. A military engineer, he has directed the building of many of his country's highways. He has been a member of the legislative Assembly, the Minister of Development, dean of the Engineering College, Minister of Agriculture and rector of the National University.

CAPT. IMMANUEL HOLGER: Sitting on the board as Chile's expert, Naval Attache Holger has served 35 years in his nation's navy. He had his first tour in Washington as Naval Attache in 1927, and his son, Jimmy, was born here. Capable, quiet, but with a twinkle in his eye, Captain Holger is a Nordic type. His wife also is blue-eyed and blond. She is one of the most popular of the Latin American set with Americans, is always bubbling with enthusiasm over something, is always ready to travel with less than five minutes' notice, is filled with a glowing sense of adventure.

MAJ. HERMAN BARON: The only delegate from El Salvador on the board, Major Baron is his nation's Military Attache here. He and his attractive wife, the former Ana Leiva, have made their home here since August of last year with their two children, Carlos and Maria. An aviator, this 40-year-old officer learned to fly in 1924, and five years ago took over the job of Assistant Chief of Military Aviation in Salvador. Before coming to Washington, he was director of army arsenals.

MAJ. SALVADOR COBIAN: Dashing is the best one-word description of the Dominican Republic's Military Attache. Tall, good-looking, with a soft voice, the major speaks English almost without an accent. He and his energetic wife are a crack athletic team, specializing in tennis. A graduate of our own Culver Military Academy, Troy Conference Academy, Albany Business College and Columbia University, the major is an enthusiastic rooter for this country. He has also attended the infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., and then was assigned to the Thirty-ninth Infantry Regiment at Fort Bragg, N. C., until his appointment to the embassy. The Cobians has a son, Albert, age 2.

COL. FELIPE MUNILLA: This dean of the Military Attaches in Washington is Cuba's military expert on the board. This small, serious-faced colonel and his sparkling gay wife have been favorites in Washington since he first came here as Attache in 1934. Both of them love the Capital and hate to think of ever leaving. Senora de Munilla is best explained by the statement she often makes with dynamic enthusiasm, "I love people." Their son, Fernando Jose, has been educated here. Colonel Munilla first came to the United States during World War I to attend a special artillery school. This is his second tour as Military Attache, which he came to in 1937.

LIEUT. COL. FERNANDO DE LA GUARDIA: A 44-year-old bachelor is Costa Rica's delegate to the board. Born in San Jose, Costa Rica, Colonel de la Guardia was graduated from Old Windsor College, England. He still speaks English with the trace of a British accent, although his 20-year residence in the United States, during which he has been engaged in business, have given him an ample vocabulary of Americanisms.

Mrs. Ballantine's husband is Mr. Hamilton's successor at the division.

Mrs. Hamilton is renting their spacious house in Alexandria, Va., and will make her home in Seattle with her parents while her husband is on duty in Russia. General's Wife Helps to Deal With Home-Front Problems

MRS. WALTER N. HILL

By Genevieve Reynolds

"My husband is in the Army. My allotment hasn't come and I have no job and nothing to live on," explained one troubled wife.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Will you hurry the check along?" she asks beseechingly.

Then in walks a young Marine wife and inquires, "Can I get hospitalization and prenatal care for my child? If so, where?

Almost before these problems are solved a harassed young wife of a sailor trudges in and pleads, "Can you get me some message from my husband who is a prisoner of the enemy?"

From 8:30 to 5 o'clock daily, tall, handsome Mrs. Hill, wife of Brig. Gen. Walter N. Hill, U. S. M. C., listens to these and other problems of servicemen's wives, children and sweethearts. A volunteer case worker's aide at the District of Columbia Chapter, American Red Cross, she probably knows more heartaches and problems of servicemen's wives than a hundred others put together. Not only does she listen to their woes, but does something about them.

A Ready Listener

Sympathetic, alert, she's had enough experience to weed out the mere complainers. But all find in her a ready listener and an understanding friend. Laughingly she says that she is a combination mother confessor and jack of all trades.

Her first experience as case worker's aide came at the end of World War I. At her home in Philadelphia she served then, as now, with the Red Cross. Biggest problems then were in aiding the returning soldiers to become readjusted to civilian life. Before her marriage she did a stint as a welfare worker.

Little publicized, the volunteer case worker's aide performs an important service. Not only does she investigate the claims of servicemen's wives for allotments, she assists them in getting birth certificates when necessary. Also, she helps to rehabilitate the wounded men returning from the front.

Find Places to Live

Still another important function, performed by the case worker's aide is finding places for servicemen's families to live. Mrs. Hill admits that is one of the most difficult jobs.

One of the most exciting spots in home service deals with highly confidential information. This branch works in conjunction with the International Red Cross. Much of this work has to do with transmitting messages to servicemen captured by the Germans, Japs or Italians

Many volunteers are needed for this and case work, according to Mrs. Hill. While some training or experience in social welfare is preferred, it isn't a must.

Other Places Open

However, if you have no yen to deal with problems, you can still find a niche as a receptionist, typist or clerk. Not so well known as the canteen or motor corps services, the case worker's aide carries on an important and necessary function. Their real duty is to assist the professional case workers. They must become thoroughly familiar with Red Cross procedure and technique.

Proudly, she tells you that she has two privates and a general in the Marine Corps. Her daughter left for California recently as a private in the Women's Marine Corps, and her 17-year-old son is a private in the Marine Corps. Brigadier General Hill holds the rank in the family.

League Unit Stops Sewing For Summer

The Red Cross sewing unit of the League of Republican Women has temporarily discontinued sewing twice a week at the clubhouse, 1612 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Edward A. Keys, chairman of the unit, announced to the group at their last meeting yesterday that the meetings would be resumed in the fall at the call of the Red Cross, when more materials are available.

Members of the knitting unit, however, will continue to work throughout the summer at their homes. This group recently took over an assignment of 50 pairs of mittens, as their portion of the 4000 quota for the Eastern Division of the Red Cross.

With the exception of the month of August of last year, the sewing unit has been sewing continuously for the Red Cross since shortly after Pearl Harbor. A total of 5564 hours of work has been rolled up by the members, with 728 hours credited to the league's president, Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann. Mrs. Gann's specialty has been making buttonholes in boys' shirts and embroidering children's woolen dresses.

Other members with a large number of hours to their credit are Mrs. Keys, 500; Mrs. Jerome J. Wilber, assistant chairman, 600; Mrs. Zaide B. Miles, 600; Mrs. Edward B. Wilson, 400, and Mrs. James E. Watson, 300.

Still others whose hours of work run into the hundreds are Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Miss Helen Browning, Mrs. F. B. Steel, Mrs. William E. Lewis, Mrs. Frank King, Mrs. E. G. Alvord and Mrs. John Allen.

While the league's clubhouse will remain open throughout the summer, the first activity scheduled for fall is the board meeting the first Monday in October, and an open meeting on the same day when a prominent speaker will address the members.

Mrs. Gann will complete tentative plans for the fall meetings before leaving in August for a visit with her niece, Mrs. Webster Knight 2d, at Providence, R. I.

Prevent Home Accidents

Strained muscles can be mighty painful. A snag from a rusty nail may result in tetanus. A knock on the head from a falling box could cause concussion. And the services of a doctor in such emergencies may well be hard to get quickly, because daily they're leaving to take care of American men at the battle front.

All these accidents are more likely to happen today to the woman of the house, since so many of them are now the man of the house, doing all the usual men's chores. But careful observance of these suggestions from the United States Department of Labor on material handling and storing will help avoid such accidents and their painful consequences.

1. Learn to lift the right way. Keep the body upright; lift with the leg muscles and not with the back. Don't try to lift too much; get help instead.

2. When handling sharp-edged or rough material, wear a pair of gloves.

3. Remove all projecting nails from barrels, boxes and crates before handling.

4. When piling boxes or other items, arrange them carefully so they can't fall over if jarred. And don't pile them so they block passageways where some one may stumble over them.

5. When piling such material, don't leave projecting edges or points against which some one may hit and bruise or cut the skin.

6. Keep all scrap and waste materials in some kind of receptacle. Oily and paint-covered rags should be kept in closed metal containers, as they are highly combustible.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Prickly heat does not attack the cool baby. And prickly heat is such a miserable, if trivial ailment, one should be on the job to protect the baby from it.

Remember the babies of 30 or more years ago who were never without their protective tummy-bands, no matter what the temperature? I remember what a shock it was to me when some younger mother put her baby into diapers alone and I could see that chubby, bare stomach. I knew it was harmless, but the fear of an unprotected abdomen was so much a part of my own education about child care, I could not enjoy the sight of that cool, smiling, naked baby.

Now we know that mother had the key to her baby's health and comfort during the summer. I look back with real guilt at the torment my children must have suffered in their part-wool bands, and I well remember the quarts of soda water I sopped on their rough, red necks and groins to ease the prickle of that old demon heat rash. I wonder now how I could have been so stupid. (Mothers all wonder that!) But we all were. We were the victims of our age and we did what we were told was right to do, because we hadn't the courage to do differently.

For all the babies' sakes it is a real blessing we have come to our senses and know babies suffer from being dressed too warmly just as adults would in like circumstances.

Most of us gladly would give our shirts to be dressed as lightly and comfortably as are the infants and runabouts these days.

If we can't be nudists, ourselves we can certainly accord that privilege to the babies. When the temperature is nearing the nineties, take off all baby's clothes right down to the diaper. Let the baby live in this both day and night. Keep him dry and clean with frequent sponge baths and plenty of soothing powder and he'll meet the succession of withering days with a skin that hasn't a red spot on it.

When it turns cool, as it does occasionally, it is time enough to add protective clothing, and it takes but a moment to do it.

Youth Enjoys Its Swing In 'Mr. Big,' at Keith's

"MR. BIG." Universal picturization of a story by Virginia Rooks, adapted to the screen by Jack Pollexfen and Dorothy Bennett, co-starring Gloria Jean and Donald O'Connor, with Peggy Ryan, Robert Paige, Elyse Knox, Samuel S. Hinds, Bobby Scheerer, Richard Stewart, Mary Eleanor Donohue, Florence Bates, Ray Eberle, plus Eddie Miller's Bob Cats, the Ben Carter Choir and the Jivin' Jacks and Jills. Directed by Charles Lamont. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

STRICTLY FOR THE JITTERBUGS, the new one at RKO-Keith's.

Evidently when Universal whipped up "Mr. Big," which opened yesterday on Fifteenth Street, they had in mind that it would "B" something suitable for either end of a double-bill. Then, in looking over the "rushes," they detected that young Master Donald O'Connor had a way with a line, could rasp out a song fairly well and hoof with a loose-jointed effectiveness that might eventually get him somewhere. It got him the star spot in the picture, a sudden blast of ballyhoo and there the whole thing is.

"Mr. Big," as a matter of fact, has its points. Its story is not one of them, but for its entire length the picture is alive with the freshness, spontaneity and irresponsibility of adolescence, "scorning the corn" of the classics. The thing is aswirl with swing, staccato with taps and at its best when all and sundry, including the Ben Carter Choir of Negro voices and especially Gloria Jean's limpid soprano, combine in some rich vocal harmonies that dress up old songs and new.

The story, such as it is, is the trite one about the teen-age enrollment at the Taswell Academy of Dramatic Art, who rebel against the classics and "Antigone," a dramatic agony of ancient Greece, insisted upon by Mrs. Davis, the rich patroness of the school, who feels that some such back-breaking drama would best suit the talents of her shy little niece in the acamedy's annual production. Everybody else, once they have examined a sample or two of its probable contents, prefers Master Donald's jazz, jive and jam revue, which, it seems, he has cooked up out of his own skull.

So "Antigone" goes into rehearsal when Mrs. Davis is looking, and so does the swingeroo, when she is not. By a bit of pretty obvious subterfuge, it is the hep-cat opera that the Broadway scouts see and book for fall production on the "big time."

In adapting Virginia Rooks' original story to the screen Jack Pellexfen and Dorothy Bennett didn't go quite deep enough to tap the wellsprings of brilliant humor, thereby rather seriously handicapping the versatile youngsters in the cast, who turn out to be considerably more clever than their material. The keynote of most that follows is struck early in the action when Donald O'Connor, fed up with the serious things of the drama, offers a bit of an improvement on Shakespeare by swinging Hamlet's soliloquy. It goes on from there to more and more of the same, marked by constantly mounting dynamics to that final night of Mrs. Davis' approximate heart failure.

Cast Teeming With Talent

There can be no gainsaying that Donald O'Connor is a teenager of something more than casual promise. He has poise, assurance and the knack of being as flip as they come, but inoffensively. He is so amiable and ingratiating that the urge to get up there and slap him down never suggests itself. The young man deserves to be heard from again—and often—in a little better-organized opus than his present vehicle, one hopes. Teamed with him, and generally outmuscling him, is Peggy Ryan, an embryonic Joan Davis, whose antics sometimes are more volcanic than humorous, but whose sum total of effect is greatly to the picture's advantage. Gloria Jean, as the young classicist of the play, sings delightfully when opportunity offers, but seems to have lost something of the gayety and sparkle that characterized her earlier appearances as a tiny, little girl, with a great big voice. Richard Stewart, as the "Quiz Kid" genius of the Taswell establishment, scores emphatically by revealing himself to be a jitterbug at heart, as well as in accomplishment. In the senior assignments, Samuel S. Hinds, Florence Bates, Robert Paige and Elyse Knox do acceptably all that is demanded of them by the script.

A sizable list of short-reel subjects supplement the major feature on the new bill. At the head of the roster is "Pacific Island No. 43," a detailed exposition of the manner in which a deceptively attractive little isle in the South Seas has been converted into a Naval Hospital base, equipped with the last word in medical and scientific means of saving the lives of the wounded. It is a revelation of unbelievable achievement, into which have been woven interesting activities at the Naval Medical Center out in Bethesda. Next in importance is "Women in Blue," devoted to the training and duties of the WAVES. The comedy note is struck by Donald Duck in Disney's "Fall In, Fall Out." The newsreel completes the program.

Femmes Dominate Capitol Stage

By Marjorie Kelly

The distaff side is well represented in the stage show which opened yesterday at Loew's Capitol, accompanying the second week of "The Youngest Profession." With the single exception of Sally Joy's trick dog, the line-up is all-girl.

Ada Leonard's all-girl band, on "furlough" after two years of touring Army camps for the USO, headlines the new bill. Miss Leonard, who is, incidentally, the prettiest band leader we've seen in a while, sings and dances in addition to directing the orchestra. Her rather exhibitionistic conducting runs more to showmanship than to leadership, but the gals manage to stay together nicely while she doubles in brass. Her song is "Mad About Him Blues," which she sings in a small, caressing voice.

Other offerings of Miss Leonard's group are "I've Got You Under My Skin," "Girl With a Drum," the girl being Dez Thompson, a deft young lady who came to Miss Leonard's band from Phil Spitalny's, and "Yes, My Darling Daughter," sung by Michaeline, who is Miss Ada Leonard's kid sister. As yet Michaeline offers little competition to her elder, but her manner is appealing.

The lone male entertainer is a matter-of-fact little fox terrier named Mascott, who yawningly watches Sally Joy go through some extraordinary paces and with equal nonchalance saunters through his own. Miss Joy, in a nautical costume which bears an agreeably vague resemblance to a sailor's, does some rather strenuous calisthenics during which Mascott balances on her head, somersaults with her and so on. Mascott is only his stage name, you might be interested to know; backstage he answers to Skippy. "That is if he feels like answering at all," said Miss Joy.

Finally, there are the famous Duncan sisters, still doing Topsy and Eva. The act has up-to-the-minute dialogue, however. "The other day I went down to a session of Congress to see the greatest show on earth"—"The greatest show on earth in Congress, Topsy! What do you mean?"—"Yeah, the Vice President was emcee!" That's a fair sample.

The feature is Virginia Weidler's first starring film, "The Youngest Profession," which as you probably know by now, is autograph collecting. Edward Arnold and Agnes Moorehead are cast prominently, and as "guest stars," whose autographs Ginny gets, Lana Turner, Robert Taylor and Greer Garson appear.

YOUTHFUL PRINCIPALS IN "MR. BIG."
From left, Gloria Jean, Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan and, not reading the book, Elyse Knox and Robert Paige in Universal's comedy, dedicated to the jitterbugging juniors, of whom Master O'Connor is the prime exemplar. All this and these now are on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

LEONARD LYONS

Gossip From Gotham

New York, July 15.

The Infantry Journal gave a cocktail party recently, and among the guests were some of the best known military experts. Fletcher Pratt stated his belief that there would be no Second Front in Europe this year. "I know I'm putting myself out on a limb," said expert Pratt, "but I have good reason to believe, positively, that there will be no Second Front." . . . He turned to the other experts, who nodded in agreement . . . Yes, you're right, Fletcher said one of his colleagues. "No Second Front. Because I don't see how the Germans could do it."

LEONARD LYONS

Fala, the President's Scottie, at last has a fiancee. Her name is "Button." . . . Nijinsky, the famed dancer who went mad during the last war and became a patient at a Swiss asylum, has left there and now is in a hotel in Budapest . . . Hans Habe, author of "A Thousand Shall Fall"—the story of his experience with the French army—was commissioned as a second lieutenant last week in Africa. Habe, son-in-law of Mrs. Joe Davies, enlisted as a private . . . Marie MacMillan, who holds the world's record for a parachute jump by a girl, will enlist in the WAACS this week . . . Sinclair Lewis is getting $5000 a week, for ten weeks at M.-G.-M.

Howard Fast is the brilliant young author of four good historical novels—"The Unvanquished," about George Washington; "Conceived in Liberty," the story of Valley Forge; "The Last Frontier," about the trek of the Cheyenne Indians; and "Citizen Tom Paine," a current best-seller . . . Fast now works at the Office of War Information. When an investigator asked one of Fast's friends: "What are his politics?" he answered: "Fast is a Whig."

Last year, when the 80-year-old Maurice Maeterlinck went to Florida for the winter, the ration board allowed him sufficient gasoline to make the trip. This week the venerable poet is leaving for Lake Placid. The ration board was reluctant to allow him extra gasoline for the trip. And so all his friends made a collection and presented him with their gas coupons . . . For the first time in his long life, because time is short, Maeterlinck is dictating, instead of writing by longhand. He purchased a dictaphone, to record the dialogue, about his memoirs, between him and his wife. She transcribes it, and neither of them can recognize the English words they used. "In every language there are two subdivisions—the written, and the spoken," Maeterlinck sighed. "English should be written, and French spoken."

John Dos Passos has written an article about the "Little People of Washington," for Fortune. . . . When Sergt. Joe Louis arrived on the West Coast, to appear in "This Is the Army," a 5-foot-3 soldier playfully said: "Watch'er step aroun' here, 'cause if you step off base once, I'm gonna knock your block off." Louis stared at him, then solemnly replied: "Brother, it's lucky God is on your side, too." . . . Capt. Andre Maurois, the French writer, is expected back from Africa soon, as part of a mission . . . Ever since the visit of Alice Leone Moats, author of "Blind Date With Mars," all women reporters have been barred from Kuybishev.

John Steinbeck's new book will be a collection of articles about the American Army, from the day he shipped with the soldiers in a troop convoy across the Atlantic, through their training period and aerial expeditions, and finally his reportage on their invasion of Europe . . . Walter Duranty will call his new book "U. S. S. R.," a history of the Soviet Union up to the war . . .

Lita Returns

Lita Ward, who is making her screen debut in the feminine lead in Paramount's Pine-Thomas special, "Aerial Gunner," is getting ready to celebrate her twentieth birthday in Washington.

HEDDA HOPPER

Job Hunts a Director

Hollywood, Calif., July 15.—Winnie Sheehan is trying to talk Sam Woods into directing "Life of Eddie Rickenbacker," but it appears Sam's next will be "The Land Is Bright," with his daughter, K. T. Stevens, playing a principal role. . . . Arthur Hammerstein again is paging Charlie Winninger to come back for a revival of "Show Boat." Charlie says, "What for? There's no longer an Edna May Oliver or Helen Morgan" . . . Bette Davis started something when she got a contract which permits her to produce one picture a year of her own. Now Fred Flynn wants the same kind of a deal, and might get it . . . I'll believe the story that Mickey Rooney is going overseas to entertain our soldiers when he's gone—not before. . . . What's this about Ava Gardner Rooney and Howard Hughes? From 5-feet-1 to 6-feet-4 in one leap.

BETTE DAVIS

Three in One

Alfred de Liagre is all excited about the purchase of John Van Druten's new play. There are only three characters in it—two women and a man. . . . Eddie Goulding, after "Claudia," pulls up stakes and goes to New York to find a play to produce, then makes it on the screen. He's having Hays trouble over some scenes in "Claudia" . . . The Franchot Tones' baby is expected in August. Lana Turner's any minute . . . When John Payne was here on leave he spent most of his time with Elyse Knox.

Holocaust

Sam Goldwyn cast a pall of gloom over Hollywood. Even the sun didn't shine through for a few days, all because he was burning down the Russian village, which cost $80,000 to build for "North Star" . . . Sam showed me some scenes on the screen. If they tie together as well as they look in the daily rushes, he'll have something to shout about. Unlike "Mission to Moscow," there isn't a political angle in it. Ann Baxter will be a big star when it's finished. You know about Dana Andrews. It's too bad the picture isn't ready for release. If it were, I think it would get praise comparable to the slams hurled at Joseph Davies' "Mission."

Love in Bloom

Richard Conte did a stretch in the Army, was tossed out on account of eye trouble, married Ruth Strome, New York actress. They're not looking forward much to spending their honeymoon at Oceanside, but that's where it will be. He's there on location for "Guadalcanal Diary" . . . Hurrah! Joan Davis has two good jobs, one with Kay Kyser and one in "Hellzapoppin" with Olsen and Johnson . . . You'll be hearing from June Carson, jive singer at the Hollywood Tropics. She's been touring camp shows with Bing Crosby . . . Lum and Abner will be guests again on Bing Crosby's radio show. They got so many laughs Lum says, "It's gone to Abner's head." You see, they never had an audience for their own.

Funny, If True

Gary Moore, the comic who took over for Abbott and Costello, shares an office with H. V. Kaltenborn at N. B. C. Gary has been formally asked to stop moving pins around on Kaltenborn's war map. The commentator was startled the other day to see by his pins that the American troops already had landed in Berlin and Tokyo. Moore's sense of humor wasn't appreciated . . . Edward Arnold, actor, and John Arnold, head of Metro's camera department, look slightly alike. Many think they are related. But Edward explains, "John was really born with the name; I only borrowed it. Mine was Guenther Schneider" . . . Extras love Jimmy Cagney's consideration in "Johnny Come Lately."

Soldiers Get Daily Paper In New Guinea

Guinea Gold comes with breakfast every morning to American and Australian soldiers stationed in the jungles of New Guinea, the Library of Congress reported yesterday.

It is a neat four-column, four-page newspaper published by the Australian army's division of public relations through efforts of a major, two lieutenants, several other army assistants and native laborers. The library has received file copies and is now endeavoring to be put on the mailing list(although there is small hope it can expect regular delivery.

The paper contains news of all war fronts, spotlights the high points of American and Australian national news and carries news of interest to soldiers from both continents. American soldiers get an American edition, printed as tribute to their presence in Guinea. Copies are "not for sale."

Noticeably lacking in its columns is any news of activities on New Guinea which would be of interest to the enemy, or any editorial comment.

Straight news, however, is interspersed with features. A box in the Australian edition in early May was called, "Tall Tale From Tokyo," and read: "It is officially stated that the Tokyo claim that Japanese planes shot down 21 Allied aircraft over Darwin is grossly exaggerated." Army medical opinion to the effect that teetotallers and nonsmokers have proved no fitter than drinkers and smokers is disclosed; and the soldiers of Australia are treated to a ministerial discussion of women wearing slacks to church in Sydney.

This news, received by short-wave radio, correspondents and telegraph, is printed in the field on presses taken from a bombed Port Moresby goverment printing office and moved about as the army units move. Copy from the mainland of Australia comes by air, along with pictures used daily and in a Sunday picture supplement.

Copies received here will be added to the Library of Congress war information collection, available to accredited agents of war agencies only. The collection contains copies of printed material from Allied and Axis countries.

Right Answer Turns Away Judge's Wrath

The reason George Makrides didn't have to pay a fine in Municipal Court for violating the June 23 blackout was that he knew all the right answers.

Makrides, who operates a restaurant at 5031 Connecticut Avenue, pleaded not guilty to the charge but admitted his lights could be seen from the street.

"Why didn't you pay attention to the sirens?" he was asked.

"My nickolodeans made too much noise," he replied.

As to knowing the danger of bombings, Makrides had the right answer also. He said only last week he had received word that his entire family was killed in a bombardment of his native country, Greece.

Further, he stated he had spent $195 on blackout precautions but said that it wasn't a good job and the rain had washed away some of the paint.

When Judge George D. N. Neilson took his personal bond and told him not to repeat the offense, Makrides had an answer to that one.

He's going into the Army next week so it isn't probable he could do it again.

Another person charged, Philip B. Pittle, didn't know the answers. He was fined $25 for permitting light to show from the back of his bakery at 5037 Connecticut Avenue.

Dockmen Confess Conspiracy Guilt

New York, July 15 (AP).—The Sullivan Dry Dock and Repair Corp., its treasurer and a vice president of the company pleaded guilty today to one count in a Federal Court indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the Government by presenting false claims.

Three other associates of the company pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to violate a Federal statute. The company and the five men had been indicted Tuesday on five counts charging conspiracy to defraud the Government by submitting false claims in the construction and repair of vessels for the Navy and repair of vessels for the Navy and Maritime Commission.

Heiress Shot To Death Here

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ROSEMARY SIDLEY, 31, heiress and Chicago debutante of 1929, who was working as a stenographer in the Government Office of Strategic Services, and who was shot to death Monday night in her home here. A coroner's verdict was that she was the victim of her office supervisor, William Knox Chandler, 42, and that Chandler killed himself.

Civil Service Commission Flag Dedicated

Scores of U. S. Civil Service Commission employes yesterday gathered in the Departmental Auditorium to dedicate a service flag to 1240 of their fellow workers who are now in the various branches of the armed forces.

Commissioner Arthur S. Fleming told those assembled that it was their responsibility to see that incompetent persons were not allowed to get positions in the Government to impede the war effort and shake public faith in the "manner in which the Government they are fighting for is functioning."

This problem of providing competent Government personnel, he said, rests more with their agency than with any other and must be treated accordingly. "An incorrectly filed form," he declared, "as small as it seems to you, contributes toward slowing up the war effort and destroying faith."

Commissioner Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin also spoke briefly, both emphasized that the "home front" work is as much a part of the fight as is the "combat front."

Seven hundred of the 1240 in service are from this area, while 59 are women. Four have been killed in action.

Motorists Crowd OPA Offices to Get Vacation Gasoline

Several hundred motorists seeking A book travel permits crowded the OPA offices at Bethesda and Silver Spring, Md., yesterday. Most of them wanted to ask questions and to obtain application blanks. Approximately 50 applications were filed at each of the offices.

The influx of A book vacationists took up most of the time of the clerks in the boards, and little was done in the other fields of rationing. Even the fuel oil panel clerks were pushed into service and had to discontinue issuance of the fuel oil coupons for awhile.

Hundreds of inquiries have been received at both suburban offices and a large number of applications are expected.

U. S. Bombers Hit Japs in Burma

New Delhi, July 15 (AP).—American B-25 Mitchell medium bombers made the Allied assault on Japanese installations in Burma yesterday, hitting railroad yards, barracks and warehouses at Myingyan and Meiktila, A. United States Army Air Force communique said today.

British Blenheim bombers joined the steady destruction of enemy equipment with an attack on a Japanese-occupied village in the Mawlaik area, while R. A. F. Beaufighters were reported to have destroyed two large steamers, an oil barge and other river craft on the Irrawaddy. All American and British planes returned safely from the scattered raids.

Pole Wins U. S. Citizenship; Nazi Prisoner

To the onlooker at District Court yesterday, Private Janusz Stawicki was just another fellow in uniform from Fort Belvoir waiting to become an American citizen, but to his 58 buddies who were with him Janusz proved that swearing the oath of allegiance had perhaps a deeper significance to him because he had felt naziism at its worst.

Janusz, who is 25 years old, was yesterday a Pole who had trekked through war-torn Europe seeking a haven—and revenge. Janusz is today an American who soon may get that revenge.

Of course Janusz wasn't the only one who had a story to tell yesterday. More than 20 of the men who obtained their citizenship with him yesterday were German, and another eight were Italian. But they all paused to listen to Janusz.

His story begins when Janusz was 20 and he joined the Polish army. It wasn't long before he, like hundreds of thousands of others, was herded into a prison camp when his army surrendered in September, 1939. But the German camp at Posen only had Janusz for a short time. He escaped into France. He went through the German guards of France, when it fell, into Czecho-Slovakia and then to Hungary where he was again captured. This time, he was sent to a concentration camp where he languished for 20 days.

In a way, he said, his reimprisonment was fortunate.

"You see," he said. "I got clothes from the Red Cross. That meant I could travel. So—I escaped into Yugoslavia."

Yugoslavia wasn't at war yet, and Stawicki says he joined the crew of a neutral merchant ship. That ship went to England.

It looked like a haven, Janusz said, but he soon was traveling again aboard another ship. This time he landed in Casablanca and then journeyed to Dakar, where he was put in a Vichy French prison camp. It lasted six weeks this time.

He escaped, and he still doesn't know quite how, he says, to Capetown in South Africa and then hopped a ship back to England.

En route his ship was bombed, but a rescue ship brought him back to England. From there he went to Iceland and finally he arrived in America—his haven—last September. He volunteered in January.

When he finished his story, everyone was silent, so he said solemnly, "It's great to be an American."

There were many echoes from his buddies.

In a few minutes the soldiers were called into the courtroom where Justice James Proctor said: "It's an honor to fight for the United States. Those who can't, envy you."

Sir Harry Oakes Funeral Held In Maine Town

Dover-Foxcroft, Me., July 15 (AP). Private funeral services were held today for Sir Harry Oakes, wealthy mining engineer who was, bludgeoned to death in his Nassau, Bahamas, home last week.

The Rev. Gordon Chilson Reardon, a friend of the 68-year-old baronet, conducted the services, with members of Sir Harry's family and only a few close friends present, in a funeral parlor.

The body was taken to the town vault in the cemetery, where the bodies of his parents have lain for years.

Lady Oakes, grief-stricken, entered the parlor alone to be followed a few moments later by her tall, attractive daughter, Nancy, wife of Alfred De Marigny, who has been charged at Nassau with murdering Sir Harry.

Services Today For Leo D. Gately; Fireman 18 Years

Funeral services for Leo D. Gately, 38, of 1804 M Street Northeast, an engineer for Engine Company No. 16, of the District Fire Department, who died Tuesday at Emergency Hospital, will be held today at Hysong Funeral Home at 9 a.m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Gately had been a member of the old Mercury football team and on the firemen's baseball team. He had been a fireman for 18 years. In addition he had been a member of the Mercury and Mohawk clubs and the Athletic Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Bertha P. Gately; his mother, Mrs. Mary C. Gately and an uncle, J. R. Gheen, who has been with No. 16 Engine Company for 35 years.

F. J. Schrider Services Tomorow

Francis J. Schrider, 47, of 922 Madison Street Northwest, for 20 years associated with the District of Columbia Health Department, died yesterday after an illness of several months.

Mr. Schrider was born just outside the District but the family moved into the city when he was six months old. After attending local elementary schools, he graduated from Business High School. He engaged in business here following his graduation until he began his connection with the Health Department.

He was a past president of the Holy Name Society, captain of the Manresan Club, treasurer of Boy Scout Troop No. 96 and a member of the Washington Council of the Knights of Columbus. He also was a director of the Kenwood Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nora Keane Schrider, and six brothers, Lieut. Col. Peter Schrider in the Marine Corps; John B., James E. Joseph C., Alfred V., and William A. Schrider, and a sister, Mrs. Catherine Sullivan of Silver Spring, also survives.

Requiem mass will be said at the Church of the Nativity at 9 a. m. Saturday with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

MADRILLON'S FACE LIFT A SUCCESS. The 10 days' beauty treatment taken by Madrillon has done the spot a world of good, made it look as shining and gay as in its debutante days. Principal change is in the bandstand, which has been tiled in South American style, adorned with a mural by Albert Kastner, which has Brazilian, Argentine and Mexican motifs. The new Echevarria Trio plays for dancing alternately with Carr and Don.

Two star guest pianists, Marianne Sarica, recently at the Capitol Theater, and Bob Hellman, were presented to Neptune Room patrons the other eve by Frank Victor. Bob, a former Neptune favorite, is now in uniform.

"SKIN 'EM ALIVE GIRL." That is the title (imagine!) of comely Ruth Mary Mack, drummer with Freddy Mack's Band at Uline's. Ruth Mary is so crazy about drums that she's done academic research in tympani. She can tell you the difference between voodoo and African drumming, the rhythm differences of Occidental and Oriental percussion. Her most prized possessions are a Manchurian temple gong and a charm bracelet made of miniature percussion instruments.

NITERY CHARACTERS are given a high old ribbing by Emcee Danny McCurtain in the new Casino Royal revue. Danny also conducts a tour of Ireland via song. Dancers Gilbert and Carroll do a step dance that would leave even Bill Robinson breathing hard. "Upside Down Emanuel" continues to make a good living by standing on his head and the Claire Ray Girls in black and white stripes look like a lot of beautiful zebras.

Jean Lee, black-eyed blues singer of the Dubonnet Room, pops up with the news that she has 20-20 vision. Seems she'd rather look at two men of 20 than one of 40. Honey, that's no way to get rich.

OF RHYTHM MASTERS. Maestro Henry Jerome, now in the Victory Room, led a dance band when he was in the eighth grade of public school. He left Norwich in '34, traveled through Europe, Africa and the Near East . . . Crossroads' Ralph Hawkins is always starred in every "righteous swing" concert staged in Boom Town . . . A. T. & T. Nets $2.22 a Share In 2d Period

Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., reported yesterday to stockholders that the volume of telephone business continued to set new records during the second quarter of the year.

Chief increase was in use of long distance. He said calls between war centers were unprecedented and that as a result "civilian demands increasingly cannot be met in full."

The income statement showed that net earnings again fell slightly short of requirements for the company's $9 annual dividend rate.

Net for the second quarter was $41,429,000, equal to $2.22 a share, against a dividend requirement of $42,058,000. For the comparable quarter of 1942 net was $41,328,851 or $2.21 a share.

For the 12 months ended June 30 net income was $162,118,000, equal to $8.67 a share, against $175,693,749 or $9.40 a share in the preceding 12 months.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Postal Telegraph Reports Loss

Postal Telegraph, Inc., reported a net loss of $2,324,269 for May, compared with net loss of $380,839 for the same month last year. For the five months ended May 31 the net loss was $3,711,610 against $1,900,866 in the similar period last yearfl Results for 1943 reflected a two million wage adjustment ordered by the War Labor Board.

War Bond Drive Mapped

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury expects to announce the goal of the third war loan drive by August 1. Sights for the campaign, scheduled to open September 9, are generally expected to be set higher than the 13-billion goal of the April drive, which actually resulted in sales of about 18½ billion in bonds. Decision on the types of securities to be offered is expected in the next 10 days.

Bank Dividend Voted

E. C. Graham, president of the Hamilton National Bank, announced that directors declared a dividend of 2½ per cent, or 50c a share, on the capital stock, payable August 2 to stockholders of record July 22.

Week's Clearings Spurt 30% in 23 Cities

New York, July 15 (AP).—Bank clearings in the week ended Wednesday rose sharply above those for the 1942 period with New York transactions the heaviest in two months, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today.

Clearings in 23 leading cities amounted to $8,905,675,000, up 30 per cent from $6,848,416,000 in the same period last year, and $1,348,308,000, or 17.8 per cent higher than in the preceding holiday week.

New York exchanges rose 42.5 per cent to $5,121,132,000 from $3,593,509,000 a year ago and were the heaviest in two months.

$22,111,000 Arkansas Bond Issue Offered

New York, July 15 (AP).—An issue of $22,111,000 State of Arkansas 3¼ and 3 per cent highway refunding bonds of 1941 was offered today by a syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co.

The offering represented part of an issue originally purchased by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and most of which was acquired recently by the investment interests from the RFC.

Four Marshals Selected for Defense Event

The committee in charge of organizing the Civilian Defense Parade, which will be held July 30, met yesterday at the Board of Trade and named the marshals who will head the four sections of the parade.

Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz will serve as grand marshal with Col. Joseph D. Arthur, Jr., named as marshal of the patriotic organization unit; William J. Mileham, chief air raid warden, as marshal of the civilian defense section, and J. Robert Sherwood, director of civilian defense in Prince Georges County, will be marshal of the surrounding counties' group.

More Bands Needed

Granville Gude, chairman of the parade committee, issued an appeal for additional bands to participate in the parade. He requested that any organization which has a band get in touch with Lieut. Charles Benter, in charge of musical arrangements, through the Board of Trade.

The parade units will begin to assemble between Third and Fourth Streets on Constitution Avenue at 5 p. m. The parade proper will start at 6:15.

Original plans called for the line of march to run up Pennsylvania Avenue past the White House and then to disband at Eighteenth Street. Because of the warm weather it was decided yesterday to disband the parade at Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania.

It was announced that in case of rain the parade would be held the following day, July 31.

Wardens' Ceremonies

Immediately after the parade is concluded ceremonies will be held in front of the District Building at which 14 ribbons will be presented to air raid wardens who have put in 3000 hours of volunteer work or over. For the 1400 persons who have worked over 500 hours a ribbon will be presented to Chief Warden Mileham.

At the meeting it was also announced that the Disaster Preparedness and Relief Unit of the District Red Cross would have six casualty stations along the parade route in case of accidents or heat prostrations.

The parade is a prelude to an intensive campaign to enlist 20,000 additional persons in civilian defense activities.

Guidebook to Sicily Serves To Orient Yank Invaders

By the Associated Press

An Allied Command Post in North Africa, July 15.—Shortly before American forces invaded Sicily they were issued a succinct little guide book containing a brief description of the island and its history, currency information, disease warnings, maps, pictures and a dictionary.

A foreword, written by Allied Commander in Chief Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, said:

"We are about to engage in the second phase of the operation which began with the invasion of North Africa.

"We have defeated the enemy's forces on the south shore of the Mediterranean and captured his army intact.

"The French in North Africa, for whom the yoke of Axis domination has been lifted, are now our loyal allies.

"However, this is not enough. Our untiring pressure on the enemy must be maintained and as this book falls into your hands we are about to pursue an invasion and occupation of enemy territory.

"The successful conclusion of these operations will not only strike closer to the heart of the Axis but also will remove the last threat to the free sea lanes of the Mediterranean.

"Remember this time it is indeed enemy territory we are attacking and as such we must expect extremely difficult fighting.

"But we have learned to work smoothly alongside one another as a team and many of you who will be in the first ranks of this force know full well the power of our Allied air and naval forces and the real meaning of air and naval superiority.

"The task will be difficult, but your skill, courage and devotion to duty will be successful in driving our enemies closer to disaster and leading us toward victory and the liberation of Europe and Asia."

Second Month Lag Reported In War Output

By the Associated Press

For the second consecutive month, production for the Army fell below schedule in June, but the Commerce Department said last night the general leveling off of arms output in recent months was due pricipally to a temporary factor—changes in types of needed war materials.

Once the required shifts in manufacturing processes and schedules are completed, the department said, production will resume its rise, although at a slower pace, until a wartime peak is reached.

The failure to meet Army production schedules in June was disclosed by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, the Acting Secretary in the absence of Henry L. Stimson, who is in London.

Patterson told a press conference that the supply program for the Army ground forces increased in June 1.1 per cent over May, but still was 2.3 per cent below April and 4.9 per cent below forecasts for June.

"The jobs remaining to be done vary widely," he said. "In the next six months we must produce 61 per cent of the total number of airplanes scheduled for 1943.

"There is nothing in the production records for May and June to encourage belief that the task ahead can be accomplished easily. It is a real challenge to labor and industry."

The production situation was discussed by the Commerce Department in its monthly publication, Survey of Current Business. It said a five-month plateau in production had brought the home front war effort to its most critical stage, but then predicted the upward trend would be resumed.

In addition to changes in types of needed war materials, it listed as other causes of the leveled-off war output the growing scarcities of manpower and raw materials and, as contributing factors, the coal strikes, the Detroit race riots and the Mississippi Valley floods.

Sweets the Hard Way

Salt Lake City (AP).—Two boys, 11 and 13, got their sweets the hard way—they tipped over three beehives and ate the honey. The bees didn't get them, but two deputy sheriffs did, and the boys went to the detention home for a while.

Lewis' Actions In Old Labor Fight Studied

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department has under "active study," an official said yesterday, a Treasury report on relations of John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers to an Illinois labor dispute of six years ago which the Chicago Daily News said had raised the question whether there was a conspiracy to violate the National Labor Relations Act.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had disclosed earlier, in response to a press-conference question, that his department had turned certain information over to Attorney General Biddle for "such action as he sees fit."

He also said it concerned relationships between Lewis and the U. M. W., on the one hand, and the Mine B Co., near Springfield, Ill.

The Mine B Co. was involved in a dispute six years ago with two locals of the Progressive Mine Workers Union, A. F. of L. rival of the United Mine Workers, which Lewis heads.

The Daily News said the question involved was whether Lewis' group had given financial aid to the company in its struggle with the rival union and whether this involved a violation of the Labor Relations Act.

WLB Asks Akron Bus Operators To End Strike

Akron, Ohio, July 15 (AP).—The War Labor Board late today called upon C. I. O. bus and streetcar operators to end a strike that paralyzed the rubber capital's mass transportation system.

Frederick H. Bullen, disputes director of the regional WLB at Cleveland, said the walkout was "in violation of national policy and labor's no-strike pledge."

The operators walked out at 4 a. m. today after a stormy early morning session at which a WLB panel's unanimous recommendation on wages and vacations was presented.

William H. Wright, president of the C. I. O. transport workers union local, said the membership "was tired of being pushed around in our requests for some consideration."

The WLB panel recommended time and one-half pay for all hours worked over 42½ hours a week. The union seeks time and one-half pay after 40 hours.

Suspect Seized In Fleecing of Gasoline Dealer

Sought since January for allegedly fleecing a local gasoline dealer out of $8500 with a phony counterfeiting stunt, Connie Arber Powers, 48, of 1447 Chapin Street Northwest was seized by police yesterday and charged with grand larceny.

Following his arrest, it was learned that last month he was arrested by Lieut. Joseph Shimon, investigator for the District Attorney's office, on a warrant which contended he tricked a woman out of $1700 at cards. He was released under $1000 bail in the later case.

Police explained that they did not know the identity of the three men who victimized the gasoline dealer, James D. Price of 1743 Thirteenth Street Southeast, until last weekend. Powers was arrested on the basis of information received from a tipster in North Carolina.

Price identified Powers as one of the trio who "invited" him to their hotel room where they would "duplicate" his money. They used two bread boards, Price's money, some sealing wax, a quantity of canned heat and hocus-pokus to make his money and themselves vanish practically before Price's eyes.

Picket Held As Objectors' Camp Deserter

Romain E. Zahn, 24, was charged with desertion from a conscientious objectors' camp and held in jail for removal yesterday, shortly after he and the two other youths who demonstrated in front of the British Embassy on Monday were found guilty in Municipal Court of illegal picketing.

The other pickets were Richard J. Stryker, 20, and Grace C. Schmidt, 22, of Newark, N. J. These two were sentenced by Judge Margold to serve 60 days in jail and an additional 100 days if they fail to pay $100 fines, but the judge suspended sentence on Zahn, stating, "Because the punishment you may face is far greater than what I might give you."

The pickets appeared cocksure when they went before Judge Margold, but when Zahn was taken before United States Commisioner Needham C. Turnage for arraignment and removal hearings on the desertion charge, he was more humble. He pleaded not guilty and waived the removal hearing. After extradition proceedings are dispensed with, he will be sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for trial.

The slender, blond youth admitted leaving the camp at Merom, Ind., on April 18, but said he did not "escape" since it was a public act with authorities notified in advance. He said it was his understanding that if a person was not satisfied with conditions at the camp, he might "get out and the Government would find something else for him to do."

Zahn, who volunteered all this information, said he had notified both Selective Service authorities and the FBI of his whereabouts in Newark as soon as he left camp. They had not seen fit to arrest him until after he picketed the embassy, he said.

An FBI spokesman said that Zahn registered for Selective Service at Beloit, Wis., stating that he was a conscientious objector. He was sent to a civilian work camp in Bluffton, Ind., and was then transferred to the camp at Merom, the spokesman said.

50 Red Cross Workers Get Certificates

Certificates of proficiency were awarded 50 Red Cross home service workers yesterday by Mrs. George A. Garrett, chairman of the volunteer special services, at graduation exercises in Memorial Continental Hall. Mrs. Garrett announced that the number of Red Cross workers must be greatly increased.

Twenty-five more workers are needed immediately, she said. It was also indicated that the membership in the home service group will be tripled within the next few weeks.

Guest speaker was Mrs. Wilmarth Lewis, national home service director. Home service is concerned with the welfare of servicemen and their families.

"Volunteers who aid professional social workers to carry on the routine of the office must be qualified by temperament, education and training" Mrs. Lewis said.

She Likes Ice Cream

BARBARA SPERL, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond G. Sperl of 144 C Street Northeast, whose disappearance yesterday resulted in a police search. What happened was this: she was sent to the store for a bottle of milk; she got an ice cream cone instead; when she got home she was sent back for more milk; this time she got another cone, and, returning, hid in the backyard to finish it, and fell asleep. She was found eventually and all is forgiven

Victory Sidelights

Last of D. C. Canning Centers Opens Today at Curtis School

Last of eight community canning centers in schools where housewives may receive training and use school facilities for quantity canning will be opened today at Curtis School, C Street, between Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets Northwest.

The center will be in operation today from 9:30 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., and at similar hours on subsequent Fridays if demands justify it. Refresher courses and basic canning instruction will be given by qualified teachers in four two-hour sessions at a cost of 25 cents per person per session.

Those who complete courses will receive certificates entitling them to use facilities of the school for quantity canning by paying a fee of 2 cents for each quart canned.

The school canning centers, organized as a feature of the school system's regular adult education program, are not to be confused with the Central Kitchen Center, 1640 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, which is manned with paid workers.

Other schools now operating as community canning centers are Anacostia, Deal, Macfarland, Paul Powell, Taft and Taylor.
